Important Figures in Administration Defeated in Debatable States

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 8.—Swept before a rising tide of Democratic victories in many States, the tremendous Republican majorities piled up in the Harding landslide of two years ago were knocked right and left in yesterday's elections.

Twenty-five States have completed their congressional election returns. Their vote stands: Republicans, 185; Democrats, 187, Socialist, 1. A majority to control is 218. Iowa was the only State which has returned a solid Republican delegation.

The Republican majorities in the United States Senate and in the House of Representatives were sharply reduced, but Republican managers declared they would not be wiped out.

SITUATION IN HOUSE.

In Indiana, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Michigan and West Virginia Democratic Senators replacing Republicans had either been conceded or were indicated.

The Republicans had an assured

This is the second time since 1875 that a Democratic Governor has been elected in this State.

The Democrats also captured one of the State's two Congressional seats, electing William N. Rogers in the first district by a vote, with fourteen small towns missing, of 38,351 to 29,011 for John Scammon, Republican.

Congressman Edward H. Wason, Republican, was re-elected in the second district, his vote with nine towns missing being 29,804 to 26,929 for William H. Barry, Democrat.

The Democrats won control of the lower branch of the Legislature, electing 216 representatives to 205 for the Republicans, with three districts missing. The Republicans retained a lead in the Senate with fifteen seats to nine for the Democrats, a Democratic gain of six. The Executive Council also remains Republican.

Later, Samuel Mariozio drove to the City Hall with the ballots.

DRY BILL DIES WITH CENSOR

Both Overwhelmingly Defeated; Opposition to Film Law, 3 to 1

Complete returns from State vote on the various referenda put added punch into the wallops handed by the public to movie censorship and State enforcement of the Volstead act.

The majority against the censorship was increased to more than ONE-THIRD OF A MILLION votes 338,442 to be exact.

The majority against "State enforcement" of national prohibition was boosted up to 103,656.

The referendum to require district attorneys to be members of the bar gained as well. The majority for it was raised 111,238.

But the referendum on the voluntary-associations or "sue and be sued" bill, which was bitterly fought by the labor unions, pulled through by the skin of its teeth—a scant majority of 462. This undoubtedly means call for a recount.

SUB ADDS TO MAJORITIES.

In most cases, the Boston vote merely emphasized these majorities. This was especially true in the censorship bill which was defeated by a vote of between two and three to one.

With half a dozen exceptions, every town and every precinct of the cities, snowed the censorship bill under with a mighty storm of ballots. In no section of the State did the proposal meet a good reception.

Boston rose up and smote the bill wickedly. All parts of the city,

The Gaston forces, it is stated, will contest the election and demand a recount.

There is a discrepancy between the figures of the Associated Press and the Republican State headquarters in the matter of Senator Lodge's lead over Gaston. The Associated Press figures show a lead of 1,945 votes, but the State headquarters claim a plus

Our New Loaf of "Bread and Milk"

The SUPER-BREAD

YOU have seen our sign, The Golden Key to Health, broadcasted through the columns of the daily papers, on the poster boards of the city and in the stores of our dealers, disclosing our great secret.

This advertisement tells about our discovery of a method of extracting the vital elements of the wheat berry and restoring them to WHITE BREAD.

Everyone knows that in the making of white flour many of the most nutritious elements of the wheat are lost. The vital germ or heart of the grain of wheat is its most nourishing and vitalizing part. Yet this germ and the bran must be removed in the course of milling white flour.

It has long been known that the most essential food elements of wheat have been lost from food for men, women and children and turned into feed for hogs and cattle.

Mr. Ward with his staff of expert bakers and learned scientists, tried for years to find the way to unlock the secret which would disclose the way to greater nutrition in white bread. Now, at last he has succeeded and is introducing a new kind of bread, which contains these vital elements of the wheat in abundance.

We have been making good white bread for many years—the best, we believe, which could be made with the best of white flour. But we add to our new loaf these vital elements which our work and feeding tests have proved make it the most perfect and nutritious bread ever produced. Our new process not only results in saving these most vital parts of the wheat, recovering from nature's storehouse the vitamins and natural mineral salts, but involves the use of rich whole milk in quantities so large that no water at all is used in making the dough, thereby building up the protein content of the loaf to an extraordinary degree.

Indeed it might be called a loaf of bread and milk—two great foods in one.

The final result is a delicious white bread in the familiar form of the best family loaf, to which have been added the vital and essential elements of whole wheat from the wheat germ and bran and also the nourishing qualities of milk.

But this is not all. Much is heard these days of vitamins and mineral salts. It has been discovered that these essential elements are absolutely necessary in human food. The vital parts of wheat which this company has learned how to save, contain abundant quantities of both vitamins and mineral nutrients, and especially of vitamin B, the one most necessary for the healthy growth of children.

Milk also is rich in vitamins and proper proteins. In short, there have been added to our new loaf, exceptional quantities of all the vital and essential elements.

That is why we call it VITOVIM—The SUPER-BREAD

Our new process is the result of a large outlay of money, of long continued patience and perseverance and our greatest reward will be in the knowledge that our discovery will ultimately be of immense benefit to mankind.

Long continued animal feeding tests by scientists of our leading universities have proved the great nutritional value of this super loaf, and pronounce it the first perfect white bread. You will be interested to know that in these feeding tests, with nothing more than VITOVIM BREAD and water, various experimental animals were raised to full growth and maturity, to breed and reproduce even to the third and fourth generation. There never was a home-made loaf or any other loaf that could accomplish the same result.

Our advertisements published from day to day will be interesting and highly instructive. It will pay you to read them. Meantime, try this new loaf—this Super-Bread. It is now on sale at the store of your neighborhood dealer.

The cost of this loaf is a little more than for ordinary bread. It is worth much more. This you will understand when we tell you that—

The milk alone in the new loaf costs more than the flour in the loaf you have been using.

Resolve from this day forth to make this Super-Bread the daily bread of your household for the better nourishment of yourself and your family.

We challenge all competitive kinds of bread and we challenge home-made bread to show an equal nutritional value with our new VITOVIM loaf.

A delicious, nutritious creamy white bread for daily table use.

STATE CENSOR AND DRY BILLS BURIED BY VOTERS

from the Back Bay to Charlestown, from the North End to Mattapan, helped to roll up the majority against the bill.

Outside of Boston the situation was the same. In Framingham, the censorship measure got 1903 favorable votes and 3084 against it. In Arlington, 1896 people favored the bill and 1817 opposed it. The voters of Lynn followed suit. In five precincts the vote stood: yes, 427; no, 1516.

Going down to the Cape, Provincetown defeated the bill with a vote of 86 yes and 381 no. Coming along up the South Shore, the bill got 435 affirmative votes in Plymouth and 1,492 negatives.

Up in the neighborhood of Boston once more, 898 voted for censorship in Wakefield and 2,288 against it.

BURIED IN WEST.

Over in the western part of the State the bill was just as unpopular. Southbridge voted it, 273 yes to 618 no. West Springfield did likewise, with 601 affirmative and 1,543 negative votes. South Hadley quashed it, returning 436 yes votes and 971 on the other side of the ledger.

Hudson also crucified the bill. The vote there was yes 593 and no 1,317.

A feature of the voting was that the only towns that could be found favoring the amendment were very small ones. As examples, are: Holland, which gave 14 yes and 11 no; fence, with 23 votes on each side, while Southampton just barely rejected it, giving 71 affirmative votes and 73 negatives.

FIND TWO NEW WITNESSES IN HALL CASE

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 8 (By the Associated Press).—Special Deputy Attorney-General Mott, prosecuting the State's hunt for the murderers of Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills, today announced two men, hitherto unmentioned in the case, had come forward with testimony corroborating the story of Mrs. Jane Gibson, who claims to have witnessed the tragedy in De Russy lane.

This statement by Mr. Mott was coupled with an announcement of his determination to hold off calling the Grand Jury until next Monday, to afford him opportunity to grill the new witnesses and round out the evidence upon which he will seek indictments.

Yesterday, before this latest development, it had been intended to convene the Grand Jury on Thursday or Friday of this week.

The authorities were frank to admit that the two men, whose names they declined to divulge, have thus far failed to indicate they saw the actual murders. They do, however, claim to have seen the two automobiles described by Mrs. Gibson.

According to Mr. Mott, the two men were standing in De Russy Lane, only about 10 feet from the Easton avenue entrance, when Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills met death.

They did not see "the woman in gray" described by Mrs. Gibson, although they were some distance nearer the scene than she, astride her velvet-footed mule, claims to have been when she halted on the opposite side of the road, silent witness to the murders.

EDWARDS BIG WINNER OVER HARDING MAN

Newark, N. J., Nov. 8.—Governor Edward I. Edwards, Democrat, overwhelmed United States Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, friend of President Harding and administration spokesman, in the race for the seat in the Senate at Washington, in the New Jersey elections.

Gov. Edwards

Running far ahead of Judge Silzer, the Democratic candidate for Governor, who was also elected, Governor Edwards held a two to one lead over his colleague, and won the election by close to 50,000 votes.

With 178 districts missing, and fourteen of those in Hudson County, where Edwards was returned with a comfortable mounting majority, Edwards had 416,815 votes, while his Republican opponent could count only 328,726.

The landslide which roared down around the ears of Senator Frelinghuysen, however, did not carry with it the backbone and structure of New Jersey Republicanism. The State Senate and Assembly will be Republican.

Governor Edwards announced he attributed his victory to dissatisfaction in New Jersey. He said that discontent was caused by the Republican tariff and by the prohibition laws.

"The Volstead act," he continued, "has much to do with our victory. We asked a modification of this law so as to legalize light wines and beers. To be sure we were against the return to the saloon, but we made a fight on the ground that the rights of the people had been infringed upon and that their personal rights had been taken away."

Women saw to it that three women were sent to the Assembly, two from Essex County and one from Hudson, where Mrs. K. W. Browne was re-elected.

ASK RELEASE OF MISS MacSWINEY

New York, Nov. 8. — Protest against the detention of Miss Mary MacSwiney, reported to be on a hunger strike in Mountjoy Prison, Dublin, where her brother, the Lord Mayor of Cork, died of self-imposed starvation, was cabled to the Irish provisional government today by Michael A. Kelly, organization director of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

"Millions of Americans will hold you responsible for the murder of Mary MacSwiney if she dies," said the message, addressed to William T. Cosgrave, president of the Cabinet of the provisional Free State government.

"Humanity demands her release."

WOODHOUSE SAYS LOVE COOLED AT SICKBED

Today

Does It Suit You? Grafters, Beware Daughterty. Memories in Smoke. Praying in the Rain.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1922 Star Co.)

YOU know now what happened to your favorite candidate or favorite villian yesterday. If you are not satisfied with election results let this comfort you.

A thousand years hence not even the war of 1914 will make any REAL difference in the world's history. To say that yesterday's election means little in the history of the United States is putting it mildly.

Walking slowly through a field every mole burrow seems to count—especially to the mole. Flying over a country only the big mountains count. To the flying machine of history this election will seem like the least important of unimportant things.

Can you suggest any real meaning that it had, except here and there where an effort was made to replace "practical politicians" with thinking men?

Here is a valuable suggestion for gentlemen that grafted during the war, including those that stole foreign patents by "selling" them to themselves, for a song: Have you grafters read the speech made by Mr. Daugherty, the Attorney-General, at Canton on Oct. 21? If you haven't, get a copy and read it. Some things in it will keep you awake. But if you move rapidly, out of the United States, reading may also keep you out of jail. That speech is full of "meat," a very disagreeable kind for some of the big war patriot-rascals.

Miner's Theatre in New York's Bowery burned yesterday, recalling memories to those that are old. The great Booth once played there.

Why are there today no such actors as Booth, or Salvini, no actresses like Rachel or Sarah Bernhardt? There are none—to those that are old. Perhaps the trouble is with their age, not with the actors.

More than 60 bodies have been taken from the Reilly mine in Pennsylvania. More corpses are in the mine.

When the explosion told what had happened the women of the dreary mining region gathered at the mouth of the mine and for hours kneeled, praying in the rain. Now dead bodies are brought out to them.

That picture of the women praying tells what mining is, and should interest those that "don't want to be bothered with the question of a living wage."

For those men and many others a "living wage" is turned suddenly into a dying wage. There should be a few dollars left over for those praying women and their children.

Victor H. Arnold, once president of a bank in Wisconsin, is preaching every Sunday morning in New York City's Town Hall, having given up business. Anybody poor and suffering is asked to call on him. That is fine, impressive.

But it's a long way from some religious unselfishness that you read about. Buddha in one of his incarnations appears on earth as a hare. He sees a starving beggar, sitting before a wood fire.

Immediately he jumps into the fire to be cooked that the beggar may eat him. But before he jumps he "shakes himself three times" to get rid of any fleas he may have living on him. He doesn't want to sacrifice them. That example of what you really might call loving a neighbor, you may find in a footnote in William James's admirable book on religious experience.

Senator Calder, running for reelection in New York, gives these figures as average world wages. United States $30.32 per week. England $15.68. Belgium $8.42. France $8.69. Japan $6.68.

You are not yet at the bottom—Italy $4.56 and Germany $3.12.

The German that gets $3.12 of American money has 15,600 marks per week, four times as much as a German professor used to get for a year, and he

MOTHER TURNED BACK ON BRIDE

Husband Denies Parents Ever "Snubbed" His Mate, However, in $1,000,000 Suit

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 8.—C. Douglas Woodhouse, husband of Dorrit Stevens Woodhouse, who is suing her parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo E. Woodhouse, for $1,000,000 for alienation of affections, admitted, in a deposition read to the jury in Chittenden County Court today, that his love for his young bride cooled after his mother's visit to his bedside in a Long Branch, N. J., hospital, where he was ill with fever.

He described a scene in the sick room when the two women met and one of them, on seeing the other, turned and left the room. He could not recall whether his mother or his wife was at his bedside when the other entered, but later he said he thought it was his mother who left the room.

MOTHER WAS "MAD."

The incident, he admitted, had caused him "annoyance."

Q—Didn't your parents visit you at the hospital?

A—Yes.

Q—Was your wife present?

A—Not in the room as I remember.

Q—Didn't your mother come in, and on seeing your wife, turn her back and go out without speaking?

A—I don't remember whether my wife was there when my mother came in, or wheter my mother was there when my wife came in.

Q—But didn't that happen?

A—It did.

Q—How did she appear to feel?

A—She appeared mad.

Q—Did you love your wife at that time?

A—I did.

ADMITS LOVE COOLED.

Q.—Was it apparent to you that between your mother and your wife there was hostility?

A.—It was.

Q.—Against whom was your annoyance directed?

A.—Toward both.

Q.—Did you feel obliged to take a position against one or the other?

A.—The same position as I had always held.

When asked if he continued to love his wife after this occurrence, he replied: "No, not to such a degree as I had before."

From the beginning of his romance his parents maintained an attitude of "indifference," according to Douglas.

Douglas said that his mother and sister treated Dorrit as "a lady." He denied that his mother "snubbed" her.

KEPT TROTH SECRET.

He did not remember that, in reassuring his future bride, he ever remarked that "my father and mother can keep on their own side of the fence—everything will be all right."

He admitted, however, that he did not tell his father and mother of his engagement until a week before the wedding. He bought a $5,000 diamond engagement ring, but kept it in his father's bank until the month of the marriage.

To purchase the ring, Douglas said he had used some of the funds he had in the bank in addition to his own allowance. He answered many questions regarding his finances, admitting he had a trust fund of $35,000 created by his father and about $10,000 more.

He once worked as an exchange

Gaston Winner if He Had Received Nicholls' Vote

There were predictions before the election that Nicholls, the Prohibition candidate for U. S. Senator, would poll a surprising vote.

He did.

The surprise was on his backers.

In Boston's twenty-six wards he got 7,656 votes out of a total of 166,924 votes cast. Small as that vote was, had it been diverted to Gaston, he would have been elected Senator, instead of Lodge.

TURKS RUNNING WILD, WARNS CURZON

London, Nov. 8 (By the Associated Press).—A special Cabinet meeting was called this afternoon to consider the Near Eastern crisis. General the Earl of Cavan, chief of the imperial general staff, was obliged to cancel a previous engagement, under a summons to attend the meeting.

London, Nov. 8 (By the Associated Press)—Foreign Secretary Curzon today declared the position in the Near East "constitutes the most definite menace to the peace of the world."

He said the Turkish pretensions could not be tolerated.

"There is only one way whereby you can make peace," declared Lord Curzon, "and that is by absolutely harmonious action between the principal powers.

"In the last twenty-four hours, however, events have dealt a rather rude shock to the expectations of the allies from the Mudania conference and the forthcoming conference at Lausanne.

"The policy of the Turks is one of nationalism gone wild, and is almost suicidal in its character.

"Turkey must learn that the strength of Great Britain and the might of Europe are a rock against which she will hurl herself in vain."

Report Sultan Has Fled From His Palace

London, Nov. 8 (By the Associated Press).—The new Chancellor of the Exchequer, Stanley Baldwin, is going to the United States before the first of the new year to conduct the war debt funding negotiations in place of Sir Robert Horne, who was forced to forego the trip because of the change in government. It was announced by Foreign Secretary Curzon today.

CONSERVATORY GIRL AND TECH MAN ELOPE

The romance of Eugenia A. Morrill, twenty-two-year-old student at the New England Conservatory of Music, and Stuart Parshley MacDonald, a senior at Tech, was lured to day when friends received cards announcing that the couple had been married at Mansfield, Mass.

The wedding took place after an elopement. The girl's parents, Mr and Mrs. J. A. Morrill of Rochester, N. H., opposed the match as they had planned a musical career for her.

Miss Morrill is a talented musician. MacDonald, who lives in Newfields, N. H., has known the girl for some time.

After their wedding the couple returned to their studies.

MacDonald, asked about the romance, admitted the marriage, but said he had nothing more to say.

DEMOCRATS GAIN 29 SEATS IN GENERAL COURT

Regardless of the plurality the Liberal Republican League announced that a recount will be demanded. Conrad W. Crooker, chairman of the league, said:

"The league is satisfied that an examination of the original ballots will disclose errors and irregularities more than sufficient to justify our claim that Gaston has actually been elected by the people."

Complete vote announced by Associated Press:

Lodge, 416,675.

Gaston, 414,730.

The figures indicate that Col. Gaston was defeated in Boston. Could he have manned the strength in the city that Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald held Gaston would have won. Fitz polled 5000 more votes in Boston than did Col. Gaston and Gov. Cox polled 2000 more votes in Boston than did Senator Lodge. The State totals gave Fitzgerald and Gaston almost the same number of votes, 405,064.

There were 50,000 voters in the State who so strongly opposed Senator Lodge that they were willing to make it manifest by voting a ticket from which the senatorial fight was ignored entirely.

This is indicated by the fact that Cox rolled up 50,000 more votes than did the Senator. The fifty thousand were normal Republicans. They would vote for Cox, and they did. But they would not vote for Lodge. And they did not vote for Lodge. Yet their animosity against Lodge was not so strong as to cause them to scratch Lodge for Gaston. They simply did not vote the senatorial ticket at all.

Despite the victory of Senator Lodge and Governor Cox, who is re-elected by 58,045 votes over John F. Fitzgerald, the vote constitutes nothing less than a rebuke to Lodge and Cox. In their last elections they won by tremendous pluralities. This time their leads are so meagre that a recount is inevitable in the case of Lodge.

Colonel Gaston, informed that the final returns showed his opponent, Henry Cabot Lodge, victor in the contest for United States Senator by a margin of 1,945 votes, said:

"I do not yet concede the election to Mr. Lodge. Beyond that, I do not care to make a statement at this moment."

In common with the returns in New York, New Jersey and the West, the returns represent a fierce repudiation of the Harding administration and a pledge of support for avowed enemies of reactionaryism.

When Cox was swept into office two years ago he had a lead of 250,000 votes.

This has been cut down by 200,000 votes. Fitzgerald made a brilliant and courageous fight.

Fitzgerald lost despite the fact that in Boston he polled 4,000 more votes than Gaston. In the entire State Gaston got only about 2,000 more votes than Fitzgerald, yet Cox's lead was over 50,000, whereas Lodge's margin was less than 2,000. This condition was brought about by the fact that Cox received 51,802 more votes than Lodge.

WHEN LODGE BEAT FITZ.

When Senator Lodge was last elected, in 1916, in the days before women had the vote, he won by a margin of 32,939 votes over John F. Fitzgerald, who yesterday was defeated as the Democratic candidate for Governor. Lodge's first election was in 1892.

The total vote for Senator of 1916 was 501,415. In 1920, when the Republican landslide swept Governor Cox into office by a plurality of 353,519 in a total vote of 934,219, there was no election for Senator in this State. The total vote for Senator yesterday was 831,405.

In order to obtain his narrow margin of victory Senator Lodge was forced to overcome an adverse plurality of 47,808 in the city of Boston, where Gaston received 103,003 votes to 55,194 for Lodge. In the State outside of Boston, Lodge led Gaston 49,754 in a vote of 361,461 to 311,707.

FITZ SWEEPS BOSTON.

Fitzgerald led Governor Cox in Boston by 48,116, the vote being: Cox, 59,089; Fitzgerald, 107,202. Outside of Boston, Cox rolled up a plurality of 105,058, with a vote of 410,089 to 305,031 for Fitzgerald.

Of the thirty-eight cities in the State Lodge and Gaston each carried nineteen.

The Democrats, in their campaign against the veteran Senator, attacked his record at Washington as reactionary and laid much stress on his support of the new tariff measure. Senator Lodge vigorously defended his course at the national capital, making numerous addresses until compelled by an attack of laryngitis to refrain from public speaking. Recuperating in the closing days of the campaign he remained in retirement at his home in Nahant.

GASTON'S LAST DEFEAT.

His opponent, Colonel Gaston, for many years has been a leading factor in Democratic party affairs in this State and in a previous election was an unsuccessful candidate for Governor. He is a lawyer and banker in Boston.

A feature of the election was the smashing defeat handed to former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier by the voters of Suffolk County. District Attorney O'Brien's lead was 24,772 votes, with one Boston precinct to be heard from.

BOSTON VOTE COMPLETE.

The complete vote in Boston:

Governor—Cox (R), 59,185; Fitzgerald (D), 107,201.

Senator—Gaston (D), 103,003; Lodge (R), 55,194.

Referendum 2—Yes, 60,703; No, 67,404.

Referendum 3—Yes, 38,437; No, 105,902.

Referendum 4—Yes, 48,724; No, 92,385.

Referendum 5—Yes, 66,670; No, 71,794.

Movie censorship was buried. The decision of the people was vehemently "No!" The State Volstead act was smothered also.

The bill to require that district attorneys must be members of the bar survived the avalanche of "No" votes.

The Democrats have gained at least twenty-seven seats in the State House of Representatives and two in the Senate. Former Senator Charls L. Gifford, Republican, was elected to Congress from the Sixteenth District, where, after having defeated Lily Darcy in the special election, it was felt the gallant men might join the disappointed women and wax him down.

The Democrats gained one seat in Congress. "Billy" Connery, son of his famous dad, an old politician of the first water, appears on the latest returns to have been elected over Frederick Butler of Lawrence.

BEVERIDGE BEATEN FOR SENATE SEAT

Indianapolis, Nov. 8.—Republicans apparently disregarded party lines, with the result that election officials were today slowly counting the scratched ballots. Returns indicated the defeat of Albert J. Beveridge, Republican senatorial nominee, but also showed the Republican State ticket from Secretary of State on down through Supreme Court Clerk probably would be elected.

The vote from 1,796 of the 3,385 precincts in the State gave Ralston 307,962; Beveridge, 294,867.

Miss Esther Kathleen O'Keefe, Democrat, the first woman of the State to try for a congressional seat, had a slight lead over Andrew J. Hickey, Republican incumbent.

DEMOCRAT CARRIES HARDING'S COUNTY

Marion, O., Nov. 8.—Marion county, home of President Harding, was carried by Donahey, Democrat, for Governor, according to complete returns today. The vote was Thompson, Republican, 7,847; Donahey, Democrat, 7,384. Fess, Republican, carried it for Senator, receiving 8,060 votes to 7,076 cast for Pomerene.

REED CARRIES TICKET IN WITH HIM

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 8.—United States Senator James A. Reed apparently pulled the entire Democratic ticket over with him, with the exception of possibly five Congressmen, in Missouri's election.

James A. Reed

Reed, who two years ago was denied a seat in the Democratic National Convention, ran strong in Republican and Democratic districts alike and showed surprising strength in a number of normally Republican communities, especially in rural districts.

One of the most surprising upsets was furnished by the vote in St. Louis county, for decades a Republican stronghold. In the 56 precincts reported Reed received a plurality of 1,533. Two years ago the county went Republican by more than 11,000 votes.

Returns from the sixteen Congressional districts indicated eleven Democrats elected. Mrs. St. Clair Moss, Democrat, candidate for Congress in the eighth district, apparently has been defeated by Congressman Sid Roach.

RHODE ISLAND DEMOCRATS IN CLEAN SWEEP

Providence, R. I., Nov. 8.—Complete returns show a sweeping Democratic victory in this State. For the first time in years the entire Democratic State ticket was elected, and that party is assured of a majority in the State Legislature. The mill sections affected by the big textile strike went solidly Democratic as a rebuke to Republican members of the Legislature who voted against the forty-eight-hour bill.

For the first time in thirty years Democrats will fill the offices of attorney-general and general treasurer. They have elected nineteen State Senators and fifty-one Representatives, the Republicans returning twenty Senators and forty-nine Representatives.

United States Senator Peter G. Gerry (D) received 83,737 votes to 69,554 cast for R. Livingston Beeckman (R).

William S. Flynn (D) received 81,804 votes for Governor to 74,867 cast for Harold G. Gross (R).

A. Toupin (D) becomes lieutenant-governor with a plurality of 6,800 votes over G. A. Cooley (R).

NEW HAMPSHIRE DEMOCRATS LAUD AMERICAN FOR VICTORY

LEADERS THANK PAPER

Declare It Was Biggest Factor in Success of Party at Granite State Polls

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Somersworth, N. H., Nov. 8.—Fred H. Brown, elected Governor of New Hampshire on the Democratic ticket, today thanked the Boston American for its assistance in his campaign.

"I want to thank the Boston American for its support in the recent campaign," he said. "It helped to ensure a Democratic victory in this State."

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 8.—Democratic party and strike leaders in this State give the Boston American great credit for the sweeping Democratic victory in New Hampshire.

Robert Jackson of Concord, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, says:

"For the Democrats of this State I tender my sincere thanks to the Boston American and wish to pay a hearty tribute to the great work which it has done in this campaign.

WON HOSTS OF VOTES.

"It was the means of winning thousands of votes for our ticket. We had very little publicity strength until the American stepped into the breach and supplied the deficiency in that respect.

"I consider that the American was the biggest single factor in the publicity line for us and as big as any factor of our strength.

"This election, in my opinion, means the passage of a 48-hour law. If I should be wrong about this, I venture the prediction now that we will carry the State by 20,000 two years hence. But, from the facts at hand now, I feel safe in saying I think such a law will be enacted."

CARRIED THE DAY.

John L. Barry, State president of the American Federation of Labor, says:

"It was the combination of the labor effort and vote with the work of the Boston American that carried the day, in my opinion. At all events they were the big combination that made the victory possible. We owe a lot to the intelligent and sustained fight which the American has made in this campaign for right and justice."

James Starr, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, and leader of the textile strikes in New Hampshire, says:

WINS LASTING GRATITUDE.

"Without any question, the Boston American was the most potent individual factor in the fight. It backed up the work of the strikers alone and single handed and in a way that has won our lasting gratitude and respect.

"It has presented our issues with courage, fairness and thoroughness. Its presentation of the political issues has been confined to the most important and its discussion of them has been marked by a boldness, candor and clearness that has compelled attention and induced serious thinking.

"I am glad to have this opportunity to speak in this way about a great newspaper in behalf of the Manchester strikers especially, all of whom have sincere appreciation for what the American has done for their cause."

Wakefield, N. H., Nov. 8.—William Rogers, elected Congressman for the first district on the Democratic ticket, said today:

"I want to thank the Boston American for its courtesy during my Congressional campaign. The articles printed by the American relative to the industrial conditions in New Hampshire have furnished the voters of this district with valuable information concerning the vital issues of the campaign. That the voters were fully alive to the real issues is shown by the splendid Democratic showing in this district."

CONGRESS LOSS FOR G. O. P. IN PENN. VOTE

Philadelphia, Nov. 8.—The Republican State ticket swept Pennsylvania, although there was a loss to Republicans of congressional and legislative seats. Voting was light in many districts of the State, but returns in hand indicate Gifford Pinchot was elected Governor by a majority in excess of 350,000. Philadelphia alone gave him 180,000 and he carried a majority of the counties of the State.

United States Senators George Wharton Pepper and David A. Reed appear to have been elected by majorities less than that given Pinchot.

Returns from 5545 districts out of 8013 in the State gave Pinchot 639,067 and John A. McSparran 598,089.

In 5270 districts in the State Reed received 579,420 and Samuel E. Shull 568,923.

Returns from 4915 districts gave Pepper 573,839 and Fred F. Keer 556,251.

WILSON GRATIFIED BY ELECTION RESULTS

Washington, Nov. 8.—Woodrow Wilson, former President, was "deeply gratified" by the decision of the American people at the polls, it was stated at his S street home. The former President, although not yet recovered from his long illness, covered a great interest in the election returns which flowed into his home. Today he read hundreds of telegrams from Democratic leaders all over the country.

Democrats Owe Hearst a Debt of Gratitude, Say Leaders

"New York City, Nov. 7, 1922.

"Hon. William Randolph Hearst, New York City:

"My Dear Mr. Hearst: You are entitled to the fullest meed of praise for the wonderful Democratic victory achieved today. On behalf of the State Finance Committee I tender you their sincere appreciation of your unselfish, vigorous and effective support of the ticket. Your magnanimous and patriotic conduct in the pre-convention, the convention and the pre-election period stamp you as the outstanding national figure of progressivism. The Democracy of the State and nation owe you a debt of gratitude which should be expressed in a definite manner. In stating this I am bespeaking the sentiment of all the anti-reactionary forces in the United States. Ever faithfully yours,

(Signed) "FREDERICK A. WALLIS."

"Schenectady, N. Y., Nov. 7, 1922.

"Mr. William Randolph Hearst, No. 137 Riverside Drive, New York City:

"Thank you for your splendid support which has helped to give the Democratic party such a stupendous victory.

"GEORGE R. LUNN."

PROCTOR AND GREENE WIN IN VERMONT

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 8.—An unusually close race in the First Congressional district marked the election in Vermont, which, as always, went Republican, but by smaller margins than two years ago.

James E. Kennedy, Democrat, who made his campaign chiefly on advocacy of a modification of the Volstead Act, ran 1,476 behind Frederick J. Fleetwood in this district, with one town missing.

Congressman Frank L. Greene, Republican, was elected Senator to succeed Senator Carroll S. Page by a margin of 23,550 over William H. Mayo, with a few towns missing. Redfield Proctor, Republican, third of his family to be elected Governor of Vermont, won over J. Holmes Jackson, Democrat, by 31,000 votes.

ELECTION OF READING IS INDICATED

Early returns indicate the election of Arthur K. Reading as District Attorney of Middlesex County over his Democratic opponent, Reilly of Lowell, by a margin of a few hundred votes.

Although only a few returns have been received from Lowell, Reilly's home city, it is believed that Reilly will carry it, but hardly by a sufficient number of votes to be elected. Reading has been running even with Governor Cox.

Early returns from Lowell show that Lowell has accepted the new city charter, the second change in two years. It means that Mayor George H. Brown will not be able to finish his second term, as the change will go in effect on January 1.

FERRIS LEADS TOWNSEND IN MICHIGAN

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 8.—With but 641 precincts missing, former Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris, Democrat, apparently had been elected to the United States Senate over Senator Charles E. Townsend, Republican. Ferris steadily was increasing his lead as additional returns were received from Wayne County (Detroit). The vote stood: Ferris 235,525; Townsend 229,450.

TENNESSEE IS BACK WITHIN 'SOLID SOUTH'

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 8.—Tennessee, where the Republicans broke the "solid South" two years ago, has returned to the Democratic fold.

Governor Alf Taylor, Republican, has been defeated by Austin Peay, Democrat, according to incomplete returns.

At State Democratic headquarters it is claimed the entire State ticket has been elected, with eight out of ten Congressmen, a gain of three.

MISS GORDON HAS A NEW GUARDIAN

John L. Sheehan at the renewed hearing before Auditor G. A. A. Peevey. Auditor Peevey is taking evidence in the petition of Dorothy's uncle, John D. Gardiner of Baldwin, Long Island, to have Jardine ousted as guardian of the heiress.

Jardine denied knowing the information Attorney Sheehan asked.

Frank Paul, Milk street attorney, was appointed guardian ad litem of Dorothy today by Judge Leggat in Middlesex Probate Court at East Cambridge. This was after opposing counsel had agreed upon Attorney Paul to serve in that capacity pending the outcome of the ouster proceedings against Jardine as guardian.

ADMITS SHE WAS SANE.

Jardine admitted that, in his opinion, Dorothy was sane when she came home from boarding school on March 12, 1921. This was only ten days before he took her for the second time to McLean Asylum on March 22, 1921.

In 1916 Dorothy was at Parkfield Hotel, Kittery, Me., with Mrs. Jardine and Jardine's sister. Jardine admitted that his sister's husband is interested in a sanitarium in Texas.

Q.—Did you know that Dorothy was in fear of Mrs. Jardine at that time (in Kittery)? A.—No.

Q.—How do you know? A.—By my best knowledge.

Q.—Do you know that your wife beat her there? A.—No. I did not.

PAID HIS OWN BILLS

Jardine said Dorothy paid her own hotel bills and he paid his wife's. This hotel stay was six months after he became Dorothy's guardian, and four months prior to the first time the girl was sent to McLean Asylum.

Asked when he planned to take Dorothy to McLean the second time, Jardine said that was on the same day on which she was taken there. He denied he hired a cab for the trip the night before.

He denied telling the girl she was merely going for a ride or that she went.

Q.—You had a hard time taking her, didn't you? A.—No.

It was three miles to the asylum by direct road, but the way they went it was six to seven miles. Jardine said Dorothy made no protest at the door of the asylum.

Q.—Did you tell her to "get out here and do what I tell you?" A.—No.

The taxi trip cost $20. Jardine denied giving the driver $10 "to keep him quiet."

TAXI DRIVER KEPT RECORD

Attorney Sheehan held up a soiled roll of paper and asked if Jardine did not know that the driver kept a record of everything on that drive. Then Sheehan asked: "Don't you want to change some of your testimony?" Jardine did not.

In October, 1920, while Dorothy was at the House in the Pines School at Norton, she wrote Jardine that she would like to hire an apartment for herself. When Dorothy returned home March 12, 1921, from school she intended to go back to school.

Q.—She was sane then, wasn't she? A.—Yes.

Jardine asserted Dorothy told him she would like him for guardian for the next five years. He added: "I told her I would have no further communication with her," or that matter, that I would not go to see her.

WOMEN LAUD D'BRIEN OVER ELECTION

Open house prevailed at District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien's office today.

City and State officials and personal friends of Mr. O'Brien were there, but what was most pleasing to the newly-elected district attorney was the large number of women and children who called to congratulate him.

Mr. O'Brien kissed the kiddies and shook hands with the women who hailed him as their friend, for he has restored the fathers to many a Boston home in the time of trouble.

One case which brought tears to his eyes was that of a woman who came timidly in with three children, the oldest not over seven. She greeted Mr. O'Brien and then told the kiddies that he was the man who would "bring their daddy back."

The district attorney listened to her tale, and finally sent the little woman away happy after giving instructions to his secretary to appear before the parole board tomorrow and seek the release of the much needed father.

The office was a profusion of flowers.

"I am overwhelmed with the many expressions of pleasure my election has seemed to bring to Boston and Suffolk county," said Mr. O'Brien. "Mrs. O'Brien and I cannot begin to thank all the good people who have helped us in this great fight."

MIDDLE WEST NET LOSS FOR THE G. O. P.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Six Middle Western States changed their political complexion as to the United States Senators on the face of returns available, with the net indicated loss to the Republicans of two Senators. In four of the States—Indiana, Michigan, North Dakota and Minnesota—returns showed Democratic candidates leading for Senate places. In two States—Ohio and Nebraska—the figures indicated the unseating of Democratic incumbents.

FIND LIQUOR HIDDEN IN KITCHEN WALL

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 8.—After tearing down part of the kitchen wall, police discovered a large copper tank filled with liquor in the home of Anna Plourde, No. 109 Central street. The woman pleaded guilty and was fined $50 and given a 90 days' suspended sentence.

'You're Alone, I'm Alone, Let's Get Married,' Proposal of Charlestown Man

"Liza, I should have married you more than fifty years ago. Let's make up for lost time."

In this manner did seventy-seven-year-old James Josselyn of No. 31 School street, Charlestown, propose to Miss Eliza Harris, seventy-six years old, of Hanson.

Nearly sixty years ago Mr. Josselyn, whose ancestors date back to the time of William the Conqueror, and who is a descendant of one of America's first settlers, courted Miss Harris.

SCREEN STAR TO FIGHT WILL OF FATHER

New London, Conn., Nov. 8.—Mrs. Pauline Beatrice Rutherford, known on the screen and stage as Pauline Frederick, is to contest the will of her father, the late Richard O. Libby, well known in this city, whose death occurred over two months ago in Norwich.

Through her attorney, Hibbard R. Norman, Mrs. Rutherford has filed in the Superior Court clerk's office at Norwich, an appeal from the probate of the will, which was admitted in the Norwich Court on September 9.

The Thames National Bank is executor of the will, which disposes of an estate inventoried at about $30,000. Mr. Libby left nothing to his daughter.

QUAINT OPERA OF OLDEN DAYS REVIVED

By FRED J. McISAACS
Dramatic Editor

"The Beggar's Opera," a 200-year-old ballad opera, by John Gay, revived and presented by an English company directed by J. C. Duff, is appearing at the Fine Arts, the little theatre in the Loew State Theatre building.

This work, said to be the first comic opera in English, was revived in London in 1920, and for two seasons the company now in Boston has been touring the United States with it.

A RARE TREAT.

To students and lovers of music and the drama, the chance to see an early eighteenth century production given as nearly in the manner of the period of the first George as it is possible, is a happy one. The surprising thing about "The Beggar's Opera" is that the casual and thoughtless amusement seeker will find a lot of entertainment in the piece.

Delving in the dustbins of the past rarely results in anything worth while. Old plays and operas which have been sunk in oblivion usually deserve to remain there. "The Beggar's Opera" is an exception.

FASCINATING MUSIC.

The piece is a narrative of the adventures of a highwayman who was fond of the ladies, and whose love for light women nearly brought him to the gallows. It is satirical in its intent and the satire wears surprisingly well. The music is a string of popular songs and dances of the period to which verses dealing with the plot were written by Gay, the author. This music is dainty, delicate and fascinating. A few of the tunes were familiar to present day audiences, but most of them had all the attraction of novelty. An orchestra which included such ancient instruments as harpsichords, viola d'amore and viol di gamba gave atmosphere to the airs.

The quality of the singing actors was very good. Not only are there half a dozen fine voices in the troupe, but they act skillfully, and display the postures, the graces, the grimaces and the extravagances of the dramatic stage of 1728 in a most amusing manner. The stage settings were a model of good taste and economy.

Joseph Farrington, as the dashing highwayman, Arthur Wynn and Charles Mugrath, as the informers and jailors, Celia Turrill and Dorianne Bowen, as the most popular of the highwayman's lady lovers were distinguished by fine voices. And the ensemble singing was very admirable.

BURGLARS LOOT HOME WHILE SERVANTS CHAT

Servants sat in the kitchen of the home of Mrs. F. Foster Sherburne, No. 39 Middle street, Lexington, and chatted.

A burglar climbed the lattice on the front porch, opened a second-story door and ransacked one of the bedrooms.

The thief departed. The servants gossiped. No one in the household knew of the robbery.

When the members of the family returned it was discovered that jewelry valued at several hundred dollars had been stolen.

Newlyweds Among Smart Set Choosing Suburban Homes, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN FARWELL A. DAVIS (Marjorie Thomas), whose wedding in July at Hamilton was one of the important North Shore ceremonials, are to make their home this coming Winter in Brookline. Young Davis, a member of the Harvard '18 class, is the son of Judge and Mrs. Charles Thornton Davis, also of Brookline. His bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Houston A. Thomas, whose Hamilton place is known as "The Locusts."

Speaking of the "younger marrieds" and their new homes—it seems that only very few couples are settling in Boston itself. The outlying sections, like Chestnut Hill, Brookline, Cambridge, and even the North Shore, seem to be finding considerable favor among those seeking a spot to establish their Lares and Penates.

Mr. and Mrs. John Simpkins, the latter formerly Miss Miriam Fenno, are to join the year-round colony at Beverly Farms, where they will be at "Willowbrook," the Simpkins' place. At present the prominent Harvard '12 man and his bride are honeymooning somewhere along Cape Cod, I believe.

APROPOS of the Simpkins family, Mrs. Nat Simpkins, Sr., has decided to spend the Winter elsewhere while her son and daughter-in-law inhabit "Willowbrook." She leaves this week, I understand, for New York, where she will spend some time with another son and daughter-in-law, the Willard Simpkins (Augusta Prescott), who both came on for John's marriage last month. Later on Mrs. Simpkins, Sr., will go to Washington for a month or so, and then make her way farther Southward for the remainder of the Winter, which she will probably divide between Camden, S. C., and Augusta, Ga.

MRS. ROGER F. HOOPER has been spending a few days in New York at the Hotel Chatham.

ONE of the busiest workers for the mammoth Atlantic City Boardwalk Exposition, coming to town December 1, is Mrs. Walter M. Pratt. Mrs. Pratt, among other things, is general chairman of the Boston Shop, the shop to be run at the exposition by the Boston League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Pratt, by the way, has a very lovely portrait done by Ratligan just a short time before the death of this well-known painter. Mrs. Pratt was formerly Miss Marietta Harkness of New York and is a cousin of Mrs. Cornelius Tangeman of New York and Newport, with whom she frequently visits.

MRS. CHURCHILL SATTERLEE of Boston is visiting with her mother, Mrs. George Winthrop Folsom at "Sunridge," her country place at Lenox. Also visiting her is another daughter, Mrs. Francis Dillon Fitzgibbon of New York.

FROM Washington comes the news that the Charles Sumner Hamlins and their daughter, Miss Anna Hamlin, have taken the house at No. 1919 Farragut square for the Winter. Boston was formerly the home of the Hamlins, and they are always sure of a royal welcome on their frequent visits here.

Mrs. Hamlin and popular Anna are closing the Summer place at Mattapoisett, where they usually entertain a host of Boston friends during the hot months. They are motoring from there to New York, where they will stay for a while before going on to Washington.

Last Summer Anna Hamlin—who, by the way, was the only American girl to entertain a European Crown Prince when the latter visited this country a few years ago—was at Bar Harbor, where she has a host of friends among the diplomatic circles. Both she and her mother are members of the Chilton Club here, and Miss Hamlin belongs also to the Vincent Club.

ONE hears that the Beverly Farms estate recently purchased by Louis Agassiz Shaw, son of Mrs. John Silsbee Curtis, is to be remodeled and further improvements made upon the grounds. During the past Summer this place, known as the Storrow Cottage, situated on Storrow Hill, was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Graeme Haughton, who are back in their town house at No. 13 Commonwealth avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis are returning this month to their Boston home on Spruce street.

MISS PONSELLE GETS TICKETS TO BIG GAME

Rosa Ponselle is going to the Princeton game. A prominent Harvard graduate has offered her two seats, which he will not be able to use, and she will not have to accept the escort of any of the young Harvard gentlemen who have bombarded her with telegrams and telephone calls during the past two days.

Rosa Ponselle

Miss Ponselle refused to accept an escort as a result of a letter which she received from a young lady in Boston who feared she would be cheated out of the game because of the prima donna's caprice. The letter, which is as authentic as it is pathetic, is as follows.

GIRL'S PATHETIC PLEA.

"Dear Miss Rosa Ponselle:

"To you the Princeton game is only an amusing event which you wish to attend because you happen to be in Boston giving a concert at the time. To me it is a vital important matter. I am very much interested in a young man who has invited me to the game. I have been looking forward to it for months. Yesterday my friend saw your photograph in the Boston American with an article that you would accept the escort of some student for the sake of getting a ticket to the game.

"My friend thinks it would be wonderful thing to have the other boys see him escort a celebrated prima donna to the game, and he has had the nerve to tell me that his invitation to me is only good in case he can't persuade you to accept his escort.

"(Please, Miss Ponselle, turn him down. His name is————(deleted at request of Miss Ponselle). It will break my heart to be left behind and you will only turn his head."

EXTENDS THANKS.

"This frank little letter made me realize that any of the boys whom I accepted would probably have cancelled engagements with other young girls and I decided that I was thoughtless and mean, so I won't let any student take me to the game," said Miss Ponselle. "Fortunately I have received two tickets and I will not need an unknown escort. But I want to thank all the boys who were so nice as to offer to take me with them."

STICK, DIG AND SAVE, A RULE WHICH WILL INSURE SUCCESS

Ascertain Your Special Bent. Avoid Being a Misfit. Square Peg. Do Not Fit Round Holes. Love Work. Possess Ideals.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW,
Chairman Board of Directors New York Central Railroad and Former United States Senator from New York.

I CONSIDER it a fortunate condition for our country that the great majority of its young men earn their own living, and that the opportunity is before them. From every family go forth the bright, intelligent, energetic and ambitious ones who are determined to succeed and rise and enter the positions God intended them to fill.

True success in life is a characteristic which enables you to be of use to yourself and to your time. It is the individuality which makes you loved and sought by your environment at home, in the church, in the community and in your place of business. For gaining success I have a rule which I formulated many, many years ago, and that rule is, Stick, Dig and Save.

Take time to fully ascertain all about your special talent and bent. One may be a good lawyer and a poor preacher, and one may be a good mechanic and a poor storekeeper. There is nothing in this world which is so cheap as a misfit, or so difficult, as Lincoln said, as to put square pegs in round holes. But, having settled upon your vocation in life and decided what it shall be, don't doubt it, don't be changing around—stick.

Then there is dig. I regret to say that among our young men there are many who think it is beneath their dignity to dig, and that they formulate false relations to their business by thinking they are underpaid for their work and consider themselves above it. The young man who enters business with that idea never succeeds.

Then comes saving. Every young man who has put into the bank at the end of the year a little saving has done something toward the commencement of a career. Every man who has purchased and owns the home in which he lives and has secured an income by which he can live is already a success. The rest is simply so much surplusage. I have no respect for a man who will not save for his family and old age.

But besides this rule, I have found something else which is of utmost importance, and that is to have ideals. I wouldn't give a snap for a young man or a young woman who did not have ideals. I wouldn't want to associate, and never do if I can help it, with a man, no matter how old he may be, who has lost, or maybe never had ideals. The dry-as-dust old chip who despises everything, and doubts everything good, I never want to meet. Preserve your ideals and you will preserve your freshness and stand a chance to live a long and useful life.

G. O. P. REBUKE NATION-WIDE IN EXTENT

Senatorial victory to their credit in Nebraska, where R. B. Howell displaced Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, a Democratic leader, and prospects of another in Ohio, although today's returns showed Senator Pomerene, Democrat, cutting down the lead of his Republican opponent, Representative Fess.

Not a single Republican gain in the House of Representatives had appeared today to count against the inroads the Democrats made in every State. Various causes, ranging from prohibition to tariff, were being brought forward as responsible for the results.

IMPORTANT FIGURES GO.

Some important figures in the Republican administration went down to defeat and some members of the Senate and House personally close to President Harding will return to private life with the rising Democratic tide.

The Republican forces failed to break into the Democratic ranks in the South and lost one congressional district which they have held there for years—the Ninth Virginia.

Speaker Gillett was re-elected. Miss Alice Robertson, Republican, of Oklahoma, the only woman in Congress, was beaten by a man—the Democrat whom she defeated two years ago, and the present House got an additional woman member, a Republican, in Mrs. Winnifred Huck, a daughter of the late William F. Mason of Illinois, who had served in both Senate and House. She was elected to fill out her father's unexpired term, and will only serve until next March.

NEW YORK OVERTURN.

With the defeat of Governor Miller of New York by Alfred E. Smith, the Republicans also lost thirteen seats of the Empire State in the House of Representatives and a Senator, William M. Calder, who was beaten by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Democrat, health commissioner of New York city.

With Democratic victories in other States, some national figures close to the Republican administration and President Harding personally went down to defeat.

Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, one of the President's intimates, who ran on a dry platform in New Jersey, was beaten by Governor Edwards, Dem., who ran on an openly acknowledged wet platform.

Senator Johnson, Republican, of California came back, as did Senator McLean of Connecticut, one of the administration leaders in the tariff fight. In Delaware, Senator Du Pont was having a close run for both the long and short terms.

In Indiana former Governor Ralston, Democrat, was running ahead of former Senator Albert J. Beveridge and thus threatened to remove from the Republican field one who had been counted on as an aspirant for Republican presidential nomination in 1924, in case President Harding should decline it.

"RADICAL" ELECTED.

In Iowa, Colonel Smith W. Brookhart rode through to victory on the Republican ticket although he was openly frowned upon by some of the Republican leaders and the platform of the State Convention repudiated many of the so-called "radical" principles for which he declared.

On the other hand, Senator France, Republican, of Maryland, charged with radical tendencies, was beaten by the Democratic candidate, William Cabell Bruce.

In Michigan, Senator Townsend, the Republican incumbent, who had a fight on his hands over the Newberry issue, was running behind.

In Minnesota, where first returns favored Senator Frank B. Kellogg, one of the Republican war horses and a close friend of the President, late returns showed him running second to Henrik Shipstead, who ran on the farmer-labor ticket. Mrs. Annie Olesen, the Democratic nominee, ran third.

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, a veteran of many disputes with the Wilson administration, was leading his Republican opponent and seemed assured of re-election.

HITCHCOCK BEATEN.

Senator Hitchcock, Democrat, of Nebraska, floor leader for the Wilson administration forces in the peace treaty fight, was beaten by R. B. Howell, Republican National Committeeman from the State, counted among the Progressive Republicans.

In North Dakota, where the Non-Partisan League issue was a great factor, J. F. T. O'Connor, Democrat, was leading former Governor Frazier, who had the Republican nomination.

In Ohio, Representative Fess, Republican, was running a close race with and leading Senator Pomerene, Democrat, who had been counted a possibility for the Democratic presidential nomination in the event of his success this year. Labor votes, it was said, were cast against Senator Pomerene because of his stand on the railroad question.

Pennsylvania, going Republican, as usual, sent Gifford Pinchot to the Governor's chair with a Republican administration, and re-elected Senators Pepper and Reed.

In Wyoming, where Representative Mondell, Republican leader in the House of Representatives, was running for the Senate, the late returns indicated a close race, with Senator Kendrick, Democrat, who was said to have some Republican support.

Wins by 418,000

GOVERNOR ELECT "AL" SMITH.

Carries New York City for Democracy by a plurality of 475,000, the largest it has ever given any candidate.

SMITH LEADS BIG SWEEP IN NEW YORK

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 8.—Riding on the crest of a tidal wave of votes that swept into office the entire Democratic State ticket and its candidate for United States Senator, gave the party a majority of the State delegation to Congress and reduced the Republican control of the State Legislature to a slight majority, Alfred E. Smith was elected Governor of New York by a plurality of approximately 418,000 over Nathan L. Miller, who defeated him two years ago.

In accomplishing this notable triumph, Smith carried his native city of New York by a plurality of 475,670, the largest it has ever given any candidate for any office.

With all but 235 of the State's 7,301 election districts accounted for, the vote was: Smith, 1,375,846; Miller, 970,388.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Democrat, health commissioner of the city of New York and former Republican Mayor of Ann Arbor, Mich., defeated United States Senator William M. Calder, Republican, running for re-election, by a plurality of approximately 275,000.

The vote, with 940 of the 7,301 election districts missing, was: Copeland, 1,125,893; Calder, 876,946.

Governor Smith's smashing victory immediately started his friends booming him for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency in 1924. In 1920 he was given a splendid ovation at the Democratic national convention in San Francisco as New York's "favorite son," receiving the complimentary vote of the State delegation on the first ballot.

He only smiled, however, when he was hailed as "the next President of the United States" at a widely enthusiastic reception given him in his headquarters at the Hotel Biltmore, where hundreds of admirers serenaded him with the Tammany campaign song, "East Side, West Side, All Around the Town."

Later when someone asked: "How about 1924, Governor?" he shook his head, and said:

"The job I've just been elected to is big enough for any man."

ATTWILL STRONGLY ENDORSES HEARST EDITORIAL ON LIVING WAGE

TELLS HOW TO AID R. R. EARNINGS

Public Utilities Chairman Suggests Four Methods Without Cutting Men's Pay

William Randolph Hearst's "Living Wage" editorial recently printed in the Boston American and other Hearst newspapers was indorsed today by Henry C. Attwill, chairman of the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission, in reporting the results of his investigation of the New England railroad situation to the Massachusetts and New England Railroad Commissions.

"I agree with the Hearst editorial," Mr. Atwill said, "that you do not increase consumption or business generally by reducing wages.

"The difficulties of the railroads will not be solved and cannot be solved as long as they are operated by private capital until dividends are earned sufficient to attract new capital. But this cannot and must not be done by an increase in the general rates for passenger and freight.

Moreover, you don't reduce expenses if you reduce the pay of two men who are receiving $55 a week to 40, and it results in the necessity of employing an additional man at $40.

SOMETHING WRONG.

"When there is a demand for a product and we do not obtain the cost of the product, there must be something radically wrong with the situation. The roads require more revenue and the question is where is it to be obtained. As general increase in rates seems undesirable, we should look for sources of income which will not increase those rates. To my mind there are four sources of revenue open to the carriers which would in all probability supply the additional revenue without throwing a serious burden upon our industries."

Mr. Attwill named these four sources as follows:

1—Compensation from those who receive the special privilege of having their freight switched to and from private tracks.

2—More adequate compensation from the United States government for the carrying of mails.

3—More revenue from the carrying of express matter.

4—Compensation for the carrying of baggage.

THE PRIVATE TRACKS

"Most of our manufacturers are obliged to receive and deliver their freight at the general freight yards of the railroads, and to pay for the trucking of the freight between the freight yard and their plants," Mr. Atwill said. "This necessarily always will be so. Therefore, why should the carrier be required to give a special service of shifting freight to and from the private tracks of the manufacturer who happens to be located adjacent to the railroad, without extra compensation? To my mind the practice of placing cars on private tracks free of charge constitutes an unjust discrimination against those who do not enjoy the privilege, and who thus have to pay for it."

Were the plan of giving service to privileged manufacturers done away with, Mr. Atwill said, it would have resulted in the case of the Boston & Maine railroad, at the rate of [illegible] cents a ton of such movement in an income to the road of [illegible],000 years. Under normal conditions, at this rate, the additional income to a road would [illegible] per year to at least 6 per cent the capital stock of the railroad, would change many an unprofitable road into a profitable one, and the necessity for otherwise increasing rates or reducing wages.

FOR MAILS.

Attwill said the present payments to New England roads for the carrying of mails was inadequate, that the cost of transporting New England mail was higher than in other parts of the country.

The express matter, he said, at the time the express companies were under government control there was a deficit of over $70,000. Upon the formation of federal control the deficit was, in effect, thrown upon the railroads.

"The solution of this problem," he said, "seems to be the increase of the rates for the abandonment by the roads of the express service, whichever ought not to be required to bear the burden of deficits in express service.

As to the charge of passenger baggage, Mr. Atwill continued, would result in a considerable addition of revenue.

He concluded:

"There is but one solution to the problems of the New England railroad situation if its people are unwilling to pay the cost of the service. That is government ownership of the railroads of the United States."

Unanimous opposition to the abolition of local roads by other large systems was voiced by other speakers at the hearing, which is being held at the State House.

SAYS BROTHER TOOK FORTUNE

brother, Michael W. Quinlan, Jr., converted to his own use practically all their father's cash on deposit in banks, amounting to $30,000, and operated the business to his own profit.

Michael W. Quinlan, a carriage manufacturer in Brookline for more than fifty years, died at the age of eighty-seven years on March 26 last. William J. Good of Randolph and Arthur M. Beal of Boston were appointed special administrators of the estate.

CUT OFF IN WILL.

Under the will Harold Quinlan received nothing, but the other children were given substantial amounts.

In his suit Harold Quinlan alleges that on Oct. 1, 1915, his father was worth $300,000. Michael, Jr., was foreman and sales manager for the elder Quinlan. When the father was taken ill, according to papers in the suit, Michael, Jr., controlled the business. At that time the father had $30,000 on deposit in various banks.

It is charged that during the father's illness, Michael, Jr., converted to his own use practically all the cash on deposit and operated the business for his own benefit until the latter part of 1916.

REFUSED ACCOUNTING

After the father recovered, he attempted to have his son render an accounting, according to the plaintiff, but Michael, Jr., refused. The defendant is also charged, through false and fraudulent representations, with having induced his father to sign over his business with the understanding that it would be given back.

The business was never returned, it is alleged, although several demands were made by the father.

Douglas admitted he had half a dozen automobiles at his disposal at various times. His grandmother, he said, provided him with "free gas and oil."

When he went into the army he found the "Government provided food you could not eat," and spent a considerable part of his income as second lieutenant for food.

He described the scene in his parents' home at Easthampton, L. I., when he informed them that he was going to marry Dorrit. He could not recall whether his mother left the room in tears. He was neither "surprised nor disappointed" at their failure to attend the wedding.

You know how slang grows. The argot of the French lower world, and thieves slang in this country, grow gradually. But how does the new strange language called "flapper talk" come ready made to life?

Young people, for instance talk about "cow's nostril" or "the cat's ankle" or "the bee's elbow." Those are expressions of high approval. Where did that thing start? Can anybody tell?

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole. Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation.

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your fingertips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless "Use Liquid Arvon"

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It does no good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store for four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

WIFE CHARGES HUSBAND SOUGHT SLAYER TO DESTROY HER

LOADED GUN, SHE SAYS

Declares She Was Shoved Through Glass Door and Kicked Downstairs

Brockton, Nov. 8.—Charges that her husband had loaded a gun and sought someone to shoot her with it, that he had pushed her through a glass door and had kicked her down stairs featured the separate support hearing, in Probate Court here, of Mrs. Hazel B. Ashley, wife of Ernest A. Ashley of Lakeville.

Ashley is a fireman for the New Haven railroad.

Mrs. Ashley asks the custody of her two children. She is living on Cohanet street, New Bedford.

On the stand she declared her married life had been one continual round of sorrow and abuse, and that she left her husband when she could stand his alleged cruelty no longer.

"Once he came home in a wild frenzy and told me that if I did not get out he would stab me and stand me on my head in the rain barrel," she testified.

She said her husband had induced her to sign a mortgage on their home to repair it but took the money and bought an automobile.

The husband, in his own defence accused his wife of being over friendly with other men. He named one, Lincoln Davis. He said he found a letter his wife received from a man named McDonald, in which he had invited her to meet him.

Judge Chamberlain asked attorneys for both sides to fix dates when the father could see the children, but withheld a decision.

DOT FESSENDEN, BUD, POSING FOR ARTISTS

This leaked out when it became known that Brenda Bond, who recently went to New York from Winchester, after postponing her marriage to Jack Payne Smith, had gone to Miss Fessenden's apartment for shelter.

NOW ON STAGE.

Dorothy took Brenda on a tour of the studios in New York, to get her a position as model also. Failing this, she "pinced" her chum as a member of the chorus of the "Forty-niners' Revue," at the Punch and Judy Theatre.

Miss Bond, who received reporters in her apartment, No. 528 West Eleventh street, denies emphatically that any "poison pen" letters had caused her to cancel her wedding plans so abruptly last September.

"These stories about letters to my family about Jack are lies," she said. "There were no letters at all."

SEEKS OPPORTUNITY.

"All my life I have wanted to go on the stage. I studied expression at a Boston school, and always meant to see if I could do anything with my talent. Jack and I simply talked it over and decided that we were both young enough to wait for a year or so.

The "Forty-niners' Revue" opened last week. Miss Bond had a rather modest part thus far.

MRS. MARY RAAB GETS HEARING ON DOW COMPLAINT

Ex-Pastor Calls Girl His 'Platonic Friend'

HOLDS 'LAW OF LOVE' IS SUPREME

Declares He Turned to State Ward When Wife Failed to "Inspire Him"

The prediction made by Mrs. Climena Leigh has come true.

When her unfrocked Baptist minister husband, Joseph Furman Leigh, was arrested on white slave charges, she told a reporter of the American:

"He will say that I was not a good wife and helpmate to him, and that he was forced to go elsewhere for sympathy and understanding."

In the jail at East Cambridge Leigh said today:

"Instead of inspiration and encouragement all I got from my wife was neglect."

On the other hand, he claimed that his friendship with Miss Anna Shelton, the State ward he is alleged to have taken from State to State, is a platonic one. He said he took a kindly interest in the girl because of her superior intelligence. He stoutly denied any infringement of the Mann act.

HIS "PRECIOUS HOURS."

Mrs. Leigh, however, submits the following letter she says her husband wrote to the Shelton girl, to prove that his interest in her was not merely friendly:

"Annabelle Dearest:

"Anna darling, I count those precious hours, I roll them over and over in my memory; they are my wealth, my jealously guarded treasure. Somehow I can't just get all the circumstances leading up to my mute appeal to you in the rain. But your tempting smile, your coaxing words as you said 'Tell me,' awoke a storm in my bosom and the hurricane force of it almost battered down my reserve of conventional decorum.

"I would walk a hundred miles just to stand like that once more in the rain, see your luminous eyes ecstatically sparkle and hear you say, as then, 'Tell me.' For, next time, I shall tell you—and tell you won't be all.

"Because I shall grab you, and kiss you and hug you as hard I shall squeeze more rain out of your drenched apparel than could be got ten out with a clothes wringer.

LAW OF LOVE GREATER.

"And then, other hours . . . let's see, the one by the gate in the moonlight, then a trains ride [illegible] secure thrown in free for you). Lynchburg (but before, G-ville). And wonderful, sweet, blessed moments of gold, all of them. And then my heart palpitates at a nearer and even dearer . . . and my recreant pulses quicken when I remember that one month ago yesterday I was reveling in the delight of your nearness . . . those hours

"I wish I were with you now. Never to leave you again. With you as mine, not only in God's sight, but in the sight of man. I can't live without you. I must have you. You are mine. I am your's, logic or no logic; law or no law, for the love is the mightiest of all. So I wish for the day. God speed it.

"Lovingly, wistfully yours,

"Leigh, who came here from Virginia, was accused of inducing Miss Anna V. Shelton to leave an industrial school and go to another State with him.

"For nine years I stood by my husband, while he struggled for success in the pulpit and elsewhere," said Mrs. Leigh.

"Then he came to me and told me of his relations with Anna Shelton. He seemed proud of it. I don't know how his Southern honor and chivalry to women square with such actions.

"I know his pride will be severely injured by his arrest. Although he is a former minister, he will be and say I wasn't a good helpmeet. As for Anna Shelton, I don't blame her for she was all right until he met her.

"As soon as his trial is over and he is proved the blameworthy one, I will go and get a divorce."

Leigh was given another hearing by Commissioner Hayes relative to bail, but he could not furnish the required bond of $1,000. It is believed now that he will not fight extradition, but will go direct to Virginia to contest the case.

MAYOR TO IGNORE VISITOR

Clemenceau Personal Guest of Higginson, Curley Thinks From Letter

Mayor James M. Curley glanced over his mail at City Hall and took therefrom a letter from F. L. Higginson, Jr. It was an invitation to contribute $5 toward the defraying of expenses of the visit of Georges Clemenceau, former Premier of France, to Boston.

Said the Mayor, "What ho," or something like that, and plucked from the pile another letter from Mr. Higginson. This was a request to disregard his previous letter. It informed the Mayor he would get two tickets to M. Clemenceau's speech at Symphony Hall free.

The Mayor became wrathy. He summoned a stenographer and dictated a sharp rebuke.

Mayor Curley asked who had designated to Mr. Higginson the authority to usurp the rights of the City of Boston in entertaining such a distinguished guest. He ended his reply.

"Being personally of a modest and retiring disposition, and having no desire to transgress upon a privilege either delegated or voluntarily acquired, the City of Boston, having no desire to embarrass you, withdraws from any participation in the exercises incident to the reception of M. Georges Clemenceau, whom, from your letters, I now assume is your personal guest."

Mayor Curley announced it had been his intention to arrange for the city to entertain the French statesman and that all expenses should be paid from public funds. M. Clemenceau is coming here Nov. 22.

"BREAKERS" LODGING FIRED AT HAVERHILL

Haverhill, Nov. 8.—What the police declare was an incendiary fire, did close to $3,000 damage to the rooming house at No. 30 Portland street, where nine shoeworkers, alleged to be strike breakers at the J. H. Winchell Shoe Co., are living.

Mrs James Carlson, who occupies one of the upper rooms in the building, was awakened by the crackling of flames, and upon looking out of windows found several different fires burning briskly on the sides and corners of the house.

The fire department saved the major portion of the structure.

Investigation after the blaze by he police and fire officials revealed that the fire had been started under a stairway, and that the house had been well saturated with oil.

When Mrs. Carlson discovered the blaze she screamed, and claims that following her screams she saw two men run away from the burning house.

The strike at the Winchell factory has been in progress now for two months. The police believe that the fire was an attempt upon the lives of the nine men in the house, who have been branded strikebreakers by the members of the Shoeworkers' Protective Union, which called the strike.

FAMILY FIGHT IN ROXBURY ON FOR 3 MONTHS

Finnegan, with his ins and outs Ldn't have a thing on the Magil family. Mary, her son Ralph, and Ralph's wife of No. 6 Quincy street Roxbury, and the now famous battle of Belleau Wood was a tea party compared with the relations maintained among the Magilos.

It started back in August. Ralph met, loved and won Catherine Oliver. Ralph's mother met, hated and tried to conquer Catherine in a different way. Ralph's way was an elopement; and marriage. His mother's attempt consisted of attacks [illegible] various times with brooms, knives and other persuaders, it is alleged. All parties applied for complaints in court, but decided to become reconciled, left the court and resumed the battle. Finally the court told them to try and live without coming in contact.

They did until Monday night. The fresh battle raged for three days and finally Ralph's father lost patience.

Today he applied to the Roxbury court for a new warrant charging David with assault on first his brother David and then his mother, he said.

"On Monday, Catherine, that's Ralph's wife, was with some children and saw my son David. She used both hands in delivering lefts and rights to his face and body. The children joined the party.

"Later, Ralph met his brother David and massaged David's chin and lip with a mean pair of knuckles. I took David down to the Dudley street Station to show them the marks.

WILL TELL STORY TO COURT CLERK

She May Prefer Charges of Intent to Kill at the Night Revel on October 31

By BERT FORD.

Complaints were sought today in Malden District Court by counsel for Mrs. Mary O'Leary Raab against Mrs. Kate Dow of Rowe street, Melrose, and three of her Somerville guests at the Saturday night revel on October 31, when Mrs. Raab, also a resident of Melrose, claims she was brutally attacked and her life threatened because of secrets which she claims to have learned about the Preston murder.

A hearing was set for 11 a. m. on Saturday, when the parties will appear before Clerk Wilfred B. Tyler to be heard as to whether complaints shall issue against the accused.

The others complained of with Mrs. Dow are Mr. and Mrs. John A. MacIntyre of No. 16 Highland avenue, Somerville, and George H Robinson of No. 109 Highland avenue. Mrs. Robinson who was also a guest, was not complained of.

Attorneys for Mrs. Raab admitted today that they have not yet decided whether to prefer charges of simple assault and battery or assault with intent to kill. Attorneys George Stanley Harvey and William H. Powers, Jr., early today conferred with Clerk Tyler and applied for process.

WISH TO BE HEARD.

They were informed by Mr. Tyler that counsel for the accused, anticipating some such action, had filed a request to be heard before any summonses or warrants were issued.

Today's move on the part of Mrs. Raab's counsel caused a stir in Melrose and Cambridge. It followed a conference which Attorneys Harvey and Powers held last night, at which they issued a statement to the effect that they had given District Attorney Saltonstall two weeks to act on the new disclosures relative to the Preston murder which they considered of paramount public interest.

TWENTY PRESS CHARGES.

The statement further asserted that as Mr. Saltonstall's office had not manifested any interest in the Raab statement and had shown no inclination to act on her counsel's request to reopen the murder investigation, they felt that they were obliged to press Mrs. Raab's personal charges based on the story of her assault at the Dow party.

EAST BOSTON YOUTH HELD FOR THEFT

John G. Smith, 17 years old, of No. 55 West Eagle street, East Boston, was held in $5 000 for the Grand Jury today on a charge of breaking and entering the store of George Smerson. Smith is alleged to have broken into the Smerson store, which is on the first floor of his home, at three different times, taking $17 in money, $50 worth of wood and coal and $11 worth of candy and crackers. He admitted breaking in, but denied taking more than a dollar or two.

HOLD BOY OF 19 ON STABBING CHARGE

Nineteen-year-old Antonio Petrone, of Morris street, East Boston, was held by Judge Hoss in Cambridge Court today in $5,000 bail for continued hearing November 15 on charge of assault with intent to murder on Silva Lagario, of Salem street. The police allege that on election day he slashed Lagario's throat and stabbed him in the back near the Boston & Maine roundhouse at Prison Point Bridge, Cambridge. Lagario is in serious condition.

AMATEUR BOXERS BATTLE FOR INTERCITY TITLES

NEW YORK AND BOSTON BOYS CLASH AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

Boston against New York!

It will be the old story over again when the best of our amateur boxers battle the class of the New York simon-pures at the Boston Arena tonight under the direction of the St. Joseph T. A. Society.

This will be the first big amateur mitt show of the season. It will show the stars of the simon-pure game, and some sensational battling is expected.

A large outpouring of fans is looked for. There are always persons on hand for amateur boxing shows who would never even think of turning out to see the pros perform. They enjoy watching the carefree youths who can punch and who are not afraid to stand up in the centre of a ring and trade wallops with the enemy.

Michael Landers.

Boston's sturdy array of ring men will go to the post favorites. This is only natural, as Boston has usually been able to get the better of New York in inter-city competition.

There is a great deal of interest in the appearance of "Red" O'Grady who will battle for Boston. He is considered one of the best amateur boxers to ever enter the ring.

Then there will be Tommy Kirby, Frank Wilson and a host of other high class boys.

New York is sending its best material for the card and what a reception the invaders will receive from our local boys.

Marty Smith is the star of the New York team. He is said to be one of the best amateur boxers in the country. He is confident in his ability to upset the local opposition.

There will also be open classes at 112 and 118 pounds.

Bryan Downey May Be Handed a Set-Back.

Bryan Downey, chief contender for a bout with Johnny Wilson for the world's middleweight championship, is very liable to be defeated when he battles Augie Ratner of New York in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Arena A. C.'s show at the Boston Arena next Monday night.

Downey had things rather easy when he showed here with Nate Siegal. This was due to the fact he had a heavy weight advantage, and also because Siegal has not been going very well lately.

Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Arena Club insisted that Downey meet a real top-notcher if he showed here again.

Augie Ratner was named as the best available man. Ratner was one of the eight men named by the New York Boxing Commission as entitled to battle for the world's middleweight title. Augie is no stranger to Boston fans, as he recently engaged in a torrid quarrel with Jock Malone at Mechanics Building. The decision went to Malone, but there was a big squawk from the fans. Malone and Ratner lately battled fifteen rounds to a draw in New York. All of which proves that Augie is very liable to upset Downey.

Louis Zeggaera.

Downey is a terrific puncher, but he can be beaten if his opponent will box at long range as much as possible and when obliged to go to close quarters step in with short, sharp punches. A short blow will beat Downey's long swings every time.

Johnny Wilson Is Busy Training Again

Johnny Wilson is busy training once more and it is expected he will soon defend his title. Downey's object in coming to Boston is to force Wilson into meeting him. Downey would risk suspension by the New York Boxing Commission to get a bout with Wilson in a Boston ring.

Mickey Walker Is Now Before the Footlights

Mickey Walker is out front before the footlights. He is doing his stuff for the Shubert people at Newark, N. J. Mickey will remain on the stage for about six weeks hen he will be ready to quarrel with all-comers in the welter-weight division.

PARKER WINNER OVER YOUNG TANSEY

The fans who attended the Armory A. A. show at the Grand Opera House last night went away well satisfied, assured that they had received their money's worth. Thirty-six rounds of boxing comprised the evening's program of fisticuffs, and in each there was enough real fighting to bring the fans to their feet many times.

In the main bout Charley Parker, of the South End received the decision over Young Tansey of Roxbury. Parker had six of the ten rounds, two were even, and the other two favored Tansey. In the second round Parker knocked Tansey down with a stiff left.

The semi-final, another 10-rounder,

Tickets for Tiger Game Are Scarcer Than Hen's Teeth

Try and get a ticket for the Harvard-Princeton game. They are as scarce as hen's teeth.

The usual last minute ticket hunters who flock into Harvard square a couple days or hours before the season's classic are being sorrowfully disappointed. Not a pasteboard in sight.

Almost with tears in their eyes the late comers are asking, begging, beseeching the power that be, but their pleadings are useless. Every standing room is at a premium.

STOUTENBURG IN EXHIBITION

Larry Stoutenburg and Arthur Woods make their last appearances in a pocket billiards match at the State Theatre Club today. Woods has a deficit of 46 points in ever-

In yesterday's match Woods had a sensational high run of 45 and other clusters close to the same number.

In addition to these matches Stoutenburg, termed the premier trick shot pocket billiardist of the world, gave two interesting exhibitions. Woods is the favorite to come through for the large purse offered.

HARVARD SQUAD GOES TO OAKLEY CLUB

Both the Harvard and Princeton squads will spend the night before the battle sequestered. Harvard will leave for the Oakley Country Club after tomorrow's practice session, while the Orange and Black forces will rest at the Belmont Country Club.

Both teams are keyed up to a more than usual fighting pitch. Harvard thought Princeton easy back in the dark ages of pre-season talk, but Roper has imbued in his gang a strange terror.

Harvard will be fighting an almost indomitable spirit Saturday. As far as football players and their abilities go, Harvard has a distinct advantage in the backfield. Cleaves, Newby, Crum, Caldwell and Gowman, no matter what performance they put on at Chicago, cannot compare with Harvard's Owen, Pitts, Chapin, Coburn, Gehrig, Churchill and Buell.

As far as quarters go Charlie Buell must certainly be given the palm in preference to Gowman even in the face of the fact that Gowman made his name famous in the Chicago game.

On the other hand Princeton was tried severely by Chicago and Colgate and found not wanting. Harvard's chief triumphs were over Centre and Dartmouth.

Coach Fisher sent his men through charges through a short signal drill outside of the horseshoe. This was done in order to save the Stadium turf which was soggy. Coach Karl Wick and Mal Logan were in pick to show the 1923 gridsters how they did the stunt back in '15.

The whole Harvard gang will be there with the exception of Phi

FOOTBALL PLAYERS APOLOGIZE FOR RIOT

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 8.—Manchester High School football players have decided among themselves to write a letter of apology to Referee Fred Hoey as a result of the row at the Manchester-Haverhill game Saturday, when he was severely injured.

Hoey was attacked by an enraged mob of spectators after he had rendered a decision which appeared extremely doubtful and gave the game to Haverhill.

Coburn, whose injury has not mended yet, Coburn will be well enough to get in the game in case of emergency, but is being saved for the Yale game.

STRANGLER CAN EXPECT A BATTLE

"Strangler" Lewis will have a strenuous session when he meets "Toots" Mondt, the crack Colorado grappler, in Mechanics Building on Friday night, if the statement of Edward Wilson of Denver means anything. Wilson, who is in town for a few days, declares that Mondt gave the champion the battle of his life at Greely, Col., a short time ago and that with the experience he gained in the bout he is likely to retard Lewis still further on Friday.

BYRON BOUT FOR PASTIME VICTOR

Johnny Clinton who has just returned from a successful Western trip, and who boxes Tracy Ferguson at the Pastime A. C. of Marlboro Friday night, is out to win back his title of New England lightweight champion.

Should Clinton defeat the hard hitting Connecticut lightweight Ferguson, he intends to post a forfeit for a match with the present holder of the title, Sailor Byron. The Pastime Club has offered to match the winner of this bout with Byron.

Sailor Byron

An eight-round semi-final between Al Carone of Milford and "Red" O'Brien of Rochester, N. Y., and two six-round bouts between local boys will be put on.

McGRATH SURE TO WORRY CALZA

George Calza, Italian heavyweight wrestling champion, will have to show at his best if he is to defeat Jack McGrath, New England champion, in their finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night under the direction of the Old Howard management.

McGrath has been training at Worcester, and he states he is in as good condition as when he made his sensational showing in the international wrestling tournament in New York.

The fact that the Old Howard management has Ed Strangler Lewis signed to battle at the Boston Arena on November 23 is another why Calza and McGrath will each strive hard for a victory tomorrow night. The winner of this match will be in a position to demand a tussle with the champion.

Calza has never met Lewis, but would like to do so. McGrath and the champion met in the International tournament and wrestled two hours to a draw.

McGrath admits the Italian has plenty of class, but he believes that his own experience, strength and knowledge of the fine points of the mat game will gain the victory.

FOOTBALL PLAYER GETS BROKEN BACK

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 8 — Ellis Calloway, eighteen years old, tackle on the Plainfield High School football team, suffered a broken back in a game between the Plainfield and Elizabeth High School teams. Physicians declared his condition was serious.

Will Play at Billerica

Billerica, Nov. 8.—The Mitchell Military Boys' School football eleven will play its return game with the Allen Military School second team this afternoon.

in which Willie Corbett, Harvard student, and Joe Curry of New Haven mingled, was a hummer. Corbett started out like a house afire, but a few stiff punches proved to him that he had a real opponent with whom to deal. Curry received the decision, and he well deserved it.

Ted Coolidge of Manchester, N. H., defeated Young Scars of East Boston in a slow, uninteresting 8-round bout, which failed to enthuse the fans.

In another fast 8-rounder, Henry Ford of the North End defeated Jimmy Manning, the pride of South Boston.

The Triple A. Club has booked a good attraction for next Tuesday evening. Mickey Travers, who recently defeated Chick Suggs, will swap punches with Red Chapman of Dorchester. They have met once or twice before, and the fans are assured of a torrid session when they meet again.

NEW GIANT STAR ONCE RED SOX

Jack Bentley, the Baltimore slugger for whom John McGraw of the Giants paid $50,000, plus several players recently, was a Red Sox a few years ago. He was signed up during the Winter but was turned back to Jack Dunn, without even a trial. At that time he hadn't started to slug the ball, although he was a good enough hitter to be used at

FLOYD JOHNSON IS AFTER BRENNAN

Floyd Johnson, modest young fellow, is working toward a match for the heavyweight title. He realizes that to get such a match a man must prove himself against the field of contenders.

He realizes that Wills is rated next to Dempsey, with Brennan third. That he must beat both Brennan and Wills, and perhaps others before he can consider himself definitely in the race. He intends to try to clear these two hurdles.

DINNY GLYNN TO BOX AT SALEM

There will be four eight round bouts at the show to be staged by the Nuumkeag A. A. of Salem Friday night.

Dinny Glynn of Roxbury will have Paul De Salva of Quincy as an opponent in one of the bouts. Both boys are rough, tough millers and should furnish plenty of action.

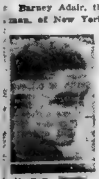
Jimmy Smith Hyonan and Ray Mercier will meet in another eight-session affair. Johnny Nelson and Johnny Marello will box eight rounds, as will Frankie Johnson and Eddie Williams.

It is a card of action and should please.

Dinny Glynn.

HARMON OPPOSES BARNEY ADAIR

Barney Adair, the fighting Irishman, of New York city, will have his hands full tomorrow night when he crawls through the ropes to battle Willie Harmon at the Moody Athletic Club of Lowell, Mass. Harmon has won his last 22 starts and is boxing right now the kind of form that will bring him to the top of the ladder in Flyweight.



Harmon

Adair has fought all the good welterweights in the country, including Jack Britton. He is a very scientific performer and the kind of fighter the crowd likes to see. Harmon is of the same type, ripping, tearing all the time, and a great crowd pleaser. There will be three good preliminaries, one eight and two six, with thirty rounds of boxing between evenly matched boys. The Lowell fans are in for a treat treat tomorrow night at the Crescent Rink.

MIKE GIBBONS IS PUT UNDER BAN

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 8.—Mike Gibbons, St. Paul middleweight boxer, and Mike Collins, Minneapolis promoter, who have been managing a string of boxers, have been temporarily barred from staging bouts by the State Boxing Commission. It became known today.

Johnny O'Donnell, Mark Moore and Billy Stearns, boxers, also have been barred pending an investigation by the commission of reports of an alleged illegally staged fight card at Albert Lea last Friday night.

Gibbons denied any connection with the Albert Lea affair.

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 8.—With the first game of the Vermont State series only a few days off, Coach Tom Keady of the University of Vermont has started his men on a hard week of practice to prepare for the contest with Norwich Saturday.

Norwich has been unable to score a point on any of its opponents this season, but the Cadets always show exceptional strength when they meet the Green Mountaineers.

RUTGERS WINS 25-0 OVER LOUISIANA

DARTMOUTH OUT TO HAND CORNELL TEAM REAL LACING

GLOOMY GIL'S GANG MAY GET SAD JOLT

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Dartmouth hopes to bring real honest-to-goodness tears to the limpid brown eyes of football's most celebrated seek-sorrow, Gilmour Dobie.

Last year Dartmouth did its darndest to etch a smile on Gloomy Gil's map when it silowed the latter's children to run all over the Dartmouth grid eleven, but all to no avail.

After that alleged battle Gloomy Gil took a slant at the score board announcement, "Cornell 59, Dartmouth 7," and, so it is said, promptly broke forth into that sad chant of Thomas Hood's.

"Oh, would I were dead now,
"Or up in my bed now,
"To cover my head now,
"And give a good cry!"

It seems he thought his Cornell team should have tallied at least 100 points and was not unconvinced that the offic ials were in league with the Dartmouth team to keep down the score, and that the 59 to 7 feature was as nothing to the many mournful incidents of the afternoon.

Hence Dartmouth's determination that if Gloomy Gil is to weep his weeping shall be sincere.

Cornell Game Is Dartmouth's Biggest.

The approaching Dartmouth-Cornell game is the big game on Dartmouth's schedule, and is viewed as the most important contest on Cornell's 1st, albeit the Ithacans' annual "Thanksgiving Day game with Pennsylvania has the honor position on Cornell's schedule

And as both Cornell and Dartmouth have strong alumni bodies and many, many friends in New York, the game on Saturday, at the Polo Grounds, is expected to bring out the greatest football throng ever to crowd the world's champions' ball park

Cornell will rule the favorite in this contest. That was settled last Saturday when the Ithacans climbed over Columb a much as they did over Dartmouth last year, team that ran up a half a hundred points and more on the group of athletics now performing for "Buck" O'Neil, rates the favgr of the layers, especially when the opponent of that team has but recently emerged a three-point winner over an army that has yet to win a game—the last being the case of Dartmouth in the Boston Univ ersity game

Students of the Game Doubt Cornell's Chances

And yet the very size of the score of last Saturday—Cornell 56, Columbia, O. and Dartmouth 10, Boston University 7—is causing students of the game to doubt Cornell's chances of victory this week

To score that number of points, or at least the first 25 or 30 of them Cornell was forced to show its hand, while to score its 10 counters the Green was not called upon to uncover the plays it has planned for the Ithacans; nor was the Dartmouth team one-half as wearied at the end of the B. U. game as the Ithacans at the close of the Columbia battle

It has long been Gloomy Gil's theory that a good offence is the best defence, and Gil dictates a schedule arrangement best suited to win his athletes to that theory. Such unheard of institutions as Niagara, St. Bonaventure, Rochester, Western Reserve, etc., have been Cornell's early season opponents since Dobie came there and in not one of those three games each season has he encountered worth-while foes.

Cornell Develops Confidence In the Dobie Attack

Against these early season opponents Cornell develops confidence in the Dobie attack, and that accomplished, Dobie orders his eleven to crowd its attacking edge from start to finish of the game, with the result Cornell's early season scores run from 35 to 110.

And by the time the few important games roll around the Ithacans are so cocksure of their attack that they believe they can beat anything that comes their way. It is true Dartmouth tumbled them two years ago, but Cornell cashed on Dobie's idea last season and xpects to cash again this season.

Off-tackle sweeps with several linemen swinging from their positions into the interference is Dobie's leading attacking weapon, and speed rather than deception is what Cornell strives for. Like Warner, Bezdek and others of that school, Dobie believes in punishing and punishing enemy tackles until from sheer weakness they are forced to give ground, and woe to the tackle that attempts a stand up, hand fighting defense for that play

Far Different Type of Play to That Seen Here.

It is a far d ifferent type of play than that which Dartmouth faced and so admirably checked at the Stadium two weeks ago. Where Dobie employs speed, Harvard uses repetitive double and delayed passes or triple threat formations. The last Dartmouth stopped by playing its tackles wide and its centre in the line, with the tackle on the strong side charging in fast, and the tackle on the weak side holding his territory until certain where the line yard play was going

But that is not the way to stop Dobie's off-tackle sweeps

There is a way however—a way that enables the otherwise sorely punished tackles to do some punishing themselves.

For long it has been our contention that close playing, spare-charging tackles, backed up by two defensive backs, can knock off tackle sweeps out of commission, and last Friday we had the privilege of witnessing this theory put into practice.

Bob Folwell's Navy Team Turned Trick.

Bob Folwell's Navy team turned the trick for us, when it not only held Hugo Bezdek's off tackle sweeping Penn State team scoreless but prevented the latter from making a single first down or any appreciable gain on rushing plays.

The Navy tackles were not exceptional individual players, yet they tore in and either made the tackle or so gummed up the intended sweep that one or the other of the defensive backs could spill the runner or force him over into the waiting arms of the end.

Dartmouth has exceptional tackles. Just now Fudge Neidlinger is leading in the race for All-America tackle honors, while Hatch is but slightly his inferior and Goldstein, the leading substitute tackle, closely approaches the regulars in ability And Dartmouth, in Don Moore, its centre, and Larry Leavitt, its fullback, has two real stars to fill in the defensive quarterback roles.

BRIGHTON AND COMMERCE VICTORS

Brighton and Commerce both romped home winners in the double header at Brieven Field. Brighton with the McKenney-Lydon combination, ran all over the field, and was thus able to defeat the Noddle Island team, 19 to 0.

The line plunging of Lydon and the long runs of McKenney were the features Brighton made the first score in the first period when McKenney caught a punt, and aided by good interference succeeded in carrying the ball across the goal line.

Coach Scanlon's boys were well on their way to a second touchdown but Lydon threw a forward pass which landed in back of the goal line.

East Boston got the ball on the 20-yard line, but failed to hold it long as one of their men fumbled and McKenney recovered for Brighton. Lydon went over for a touch down on the next play

The third touchdown came in the second quarter, when McKenney, on a criss-cross play carried the ball over from the forty-yard line.

East Boston held the Brighton boys scoreless in the last half.

In the Commerce Mechanics game the ball was in Mechanic's territory all the time. Commerce won, 27 0 In the first quarter Commerce scored twice, first, when McDonald went around left end from Mechanic's forty-yard line, and again when Buckley smashed through from the twelve-yard line. In the last half, Buckley again went to the front. He intercepted a forward pass and ran thirty five yards for a touchdown. Sullivan followed suit a moment later, as he also snatched a forward out of the air, and carried the ball over the line

CAMBRIDGE HAS A Y. M. C. A. RUN

On Nov. 12, Cambridge residents will have the pleasure of witnessing the first "Two-States" cross-country run under the direction of the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. The run is open to all Y. M. C. A.s in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and is over a five-mile course

The event will start at City Hall and all entries should be made in accordance with all competition Y. M. C. A.s of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

PLAY GIRLS' FIELD HOCKEY GAMES TODAY

Because of the rain and wet grounds the four Greater Boston interscholastic Girls' Field Hockey League games scheduled yesterday were postponed. Two of the games between Arlington and Dedham and Watertown and Winchester High will be played today. The other two games will be played Friday.

Concord Plays Natick

Concord High will play Natick High Saturday. Coach Chester K. Delano is putting his Concord squad through hard drilling this week in preparation for the contest.

DORCHESTER AND LATIN WILL HAVE BATTLE

By FRED C. LANE.

Two school contests, both of which carry a punch, is the offering today. Dorchester and Boston Latin will serve as the main attraction in the city, and Groton and St. Marks will meet at Groton.

Dorchester succumbed to the onslaught of the English High eleven. This game should give a good idea what team will be favorite when English and Latin meet on Thanksgiving Day.

Coach Fitzgerald of the Latin eleven has a smooth working machine. They proved their worth when they defeated the strong Boston College High eleven Coach Prendergast Has Perfected a Defence.

Since that victory of English High over his team, Coach Bill Prendergast of the Dorchester contingent has perfected a defence that will be hard to beat. Dorchester was victim of fate in their English High contest. A couple of bad passes that were turned into touchdowns by the English High boys, proved the team's downfall.

No such performance is expected by the House of Prendergast on the afternoon. The Latin boys are facing the stiffest ordeal of the season in running their forces against such an opponent.

The private school encounter carries the same amount of interest this year as in other days. Neither school, however, has a chance to win the championship in the series

Saugus Will Give Somersworth a Reception.

The stage is all set at Saugus to give the Somersworth High team of New Hampshire the greatest reception ever offered a visiting team This game will be played at Blackfold Field. The contest has been set ahead to give the various organizations in the town plenty of opportunity to entertain the New Hampshire squad. The Saugus boys have cut their notch in scholastic circles this season like never before The team has not suffered a defeat

Coach Beresford is deserving of much praise on the showing of this year's eleven considering the handicap under which he works. There are only fifty male scholars attending the school, yet the football team would do justice to many of our larger high schools

Danvers High and Gloucester High, which recently withdrew from the North Shore League, will wage a hectic battle on the Danvers Athletic Field on Saturday morning

DILBOY POST HAS AMATEUR BOXING

K. of C. Hall, Highland avenue, Somerville, will be the scene of some keen competition and plenty of action, tomorrow evening, when the amateurs get together in the monthly amateur tournament under the auspices of Dilboy Post, V. F. W. With the reappearance of Johnny Zarko, the 112 pond amateur champion of Manchester, N. H., having been assured, the boys of this class around Greater Boston are very desirous of taking him into camp

This youngster proved a sensation at the last tournament staged by th post and the fans are more than anxious to see him in action again Coupled with this entry the committee has been fortunate in receiving the entry of "Duchey" Goldman, 125 pound Newsboy Champion. These two entries, together with that of "Dick" Flanagan, former 158-pound champion, are indicative of the calibre of the show the fans will be treated to that journey to Somerville.

HARVARD CREWS HAVE RACE FRIDAY

Muller's methods will be tried and tested as to their advantage over the former Harvard rowing system on Friday when A and B varsity eights will race the class eights coached by Ed. Brown.

This race will close the Fall rowing season. It will be held over the mile and seven-eighths course between the Cottage Farm Bridge and the Union Boat Club.

Muller's coaching job depends on the outcome of Friday's race

SIX ARE ENTERED IN CHAMPIONSHIP

The New England pocket billiard championship starts on Saturday night. Five of the best players in New England have entered, and one from the Nutmeg State will increase the list for a week's play at the State Theatre Club rooms.

St Jean, Robert Blakely, McCrohan of Worcester and Daley of Lynn have sent in their names to try for Everett Ingraham's title.

TRAINER SAYS TIGERS IN GOOD SHAPE

Princeton, N J. Nov 8—The Princeton football squad took the first dose of Coach Roper's hard work medicine and spent three hours in stiff preparation for the battle with Harvard Saturday

The Tigers were given their first scrimmage since Saturday. The final scrimmage, which is expected to bring the men to top form, is scheduled for this afternoon

Thursday the workout will be delegated to smoothing out the rough spots in the machine and Friday morning, between 10 and 12 o'clock, the last workout will take place in the Harvard Stadium

The squad of thirty four men will depart from Tigertown at 9 p. m., Thursday, entrain again at New York and spend the night on the Midnight, and arrive here at 7 a. m. Friday.

The Orange and Black machine went smooth and all the regulars were on hand for practice

Coach Roper followed his policy of last week and did not take any serious chances with a new injury cropping up among his prize charges. withheld Johnny Gorman, who plited the Nassau ship through Stagg's Maroons and "Whoops" Snively, the forward passing sen from the encounter with the Omlettes.

Keene Fitzpatrick Says Players in Good Shape

Willie Wingate, Gorman's understudy, barked signals and "Red" Howard was in Snively's place at guard. Keene Fitzpatrick, trainer of the squad, reported that the men are in good condition, and unless scrimmage tomorrow should take toll, every regular and practically all of the second varsity men should be in top form for the fray with the Fishermen

The scrimmage took on the aspect of a miniature Harvard game. The Omelettes used the Crimson style of play, running ends, bucking the line, passing and kicking in the form which is expected from the Crimson Saturday.

The following lineup took the field first:

Gray and Smith, ends; Treat and Baker, tackles; Dickinson and Howard, guards; Alford, center; Winegate, quarterback; Cleaves, full back; and Crum and Caldwell, half backs.

Scrubs Used Crimson Plays Against Regulars

The scrubs showed an unusual amount of effect with the Crimson plays, and after recovering a Varsity fumble made a neat forward pass, Johnson to Smith. The last named surprised the Varsity by dashing forty yards for a touchdown.

Previously the regulars made two scores, once on a pass to Wingate who received the ball on the 20 yard line, and the last on line bucks by Crum after he and Cleaves had advanced the ball from midfield to the ten yard line. Ken Smith kicked both goals.

Following is the second varsity: Stout and Tilteon, ends; Hills and Snyder, tackles; Buckner and Thompson, guards, Griffin, centre Dinemore, quarter; Newby, Bostin and Bergen, backs; relieved the first team.

VICTORIA HOCKEY PLAYERS TO MEET

Boston's new hockey team, the Victoria Hockey Club, captained by Percy Symonds and managed by Louis P. Lafranche, will hold its first meeting of the season ton ght at the Boston Arena at which plans for the season will be outlined by the captain and manager and also President Emil P. Former Pere Marquette players are among the candidates for the new team, including Captain Bynott, Pop Conley, Eddie Enright, Jim Healy, Ben Healy and Jiggy Donahue. Don Stewart, Unk Fraser, Johnny Marriff, Stuart Shatford, A. C. McQuaid and Ed Bergeron all former Canadian players, are among the most prominent new candidates.

Frothingham Phibbs on Selecting the Most Beautiful Woman

By Nat N. Dorfman

"I SEE by the papers where they're going to select the most beautiful girl in America for the sixty-seventh time this week," opened Frothingham Phibbs in mock derision as soon as the evening meal was over.

"Evidently you don't take any stock in America's most beautiful women," retorted Amanda, his battleaxe and chief enemy, who sensed something wrong. "But knowing you as I do, Mr. Phibbs, I believe you must be ill this evening to talk in that vein."

"No," he tried to assure lightly. "I believe all of these beauty contests are a fraud, as are—ahem—most of the beauties themselves. Oh, for the simple girls of yester day! Where, oh, where are they?"

Mrs. Phibbs laughed most raucously.

"Where are the simple girls of old?" she asked with dramatic gusto. "Why, my dear, they're all married, that's where they are. And what's more, they're not so simple any more after they get hitched up to men like you. Perhaps, if we women of yore weren't so simple we would never have gotten married."

"I don't see what you've lost by marrying me," said the heated Frothy. "I notice you still manage to retain your girthy form and your temper."

"Yes," said the missus in a voice like the cut-out of an automobile trying to make a hill, "but look at the freedom I've lost—my precious ideals. Marriage even robs a woman of her name."

"Which isn't a bad thing in your case. Changing it from Amanda Gluts to Mrs. Phibbs is quite an improvement, I should think. And besides," added the suddenly inspired Phibbs, "the creditors. I notice, don't hound you under your maiden name for the things you buy. They come to me to pay your bills."

"They may come," snorted the missus, "but the question is, do they get it? But getting back to beauties, don't you know they are an American institution?"

"That explains it," said Mr. Phibbs, cryptically.

"Explains what?" Amanda asked, puzzled.

"Where the beauties confine themselves for five or six hours every day where they make-up—in an institution."

"Beautiful women don't use cosmetics," she said with a flourish. "The most they do is use a little powder."

"Which seems to puff some of 'em up as they strut down the stre... But as for myself, I never bother with 'em. I wouldn't go out of my way to see a beauty winner. And, besides," he philosophized, "there's beauty contests being held every hour of the day in every State in the Union to decide the most beautiful girl in the country, but the chances are the prettiest never even attend. They're too busy preparing dinner for their husbands."

"Now you're talking," said the missus, rather triumphantly.

"Yes," added Frothingham who didn't want to see his wife snatch victory away from him, "and if the can opener gets busted, there isn't any dinner.

"You've got a sense of humor," said the missus bitterly, "but you sure do succeed in concealing it. By the way," she said sullenly, "Do you know that charming girl Miss Grace Flanper who won the first prize in a beauty contest held under the auspices of the Peruvian Pear Preservers' Association is coming over to the house tonight?"

"You don't say?" asked Phibbs, who hastily rose from the comfortable chair he was sitting on. "Well, I must be getting ready."

"Ready for what?"

"Oh," he said quite sprightly, "I've got to shave and primp up. You don't expect me to meet Miss Flapper looking the way I do, do you?"

"I thought you didn't care to meet beauty winners?" she asked, as he disappeared in the direction of the bathroom, but he pretended he didn't hear.

OUR HIGHBROW ESSAYS

By Joy Sutherland

FOOTBALL is four fifteen-minute battles between twenty-two husky raging giants and a couple of lonesome, loose-jointed referees who usually do what the huskiest player on either team says should be done

The game is played in the Fall and frenzied state, with each player wearing enough padded armor to make Richard Coeur de Lion think he was in his Summer-weight pajamas.

A football is an oval-shaped object about the size of a mosquito-house pillow and pumped as full of wind as a Congressman four days before election. The main idea of the game is for each player to knock unconscious and pulverize five of his opponents and thoroughly masticate the remaining half dozen four minutes and thirty-nine seconds after the starting whistle blows.

The ball is placed on a young mole hill in the middle of the field and a large-footed hero sends it sailing down the field into the arms of a waiting player who immediately begins to run toward all four points of the compass at the same time. All of the other team hit him simultaneously, and the grand-stand yells its appreciation as he gracefully plows a six-inch furrow in the frozen ground with his Roman nose.

But when the sweet young things the looking on and thrilling to the bravery of the wonderful boys, then do the heroes of the mole-skins place their faces up against each other and jump so hard that the Rock of Gibraltar wouldn't have any more chance than a pet skunk at a fashion show.

ARE YOU A QUITTER?

It is easy for you to give up when facing adversity.

Think everything which goes wrong is "just your luck," and so you let come what will without effort to protect yourself?

Throw up the sponge and say it is no use for you to try to overcome the obstacles or circumvent a detrimental condition, do YOU?

When you were younger and engaged in athletics did you do well only when you were in the lead, and when the other fellow passed you, or came abreast even, immediately lost your spirit and gave up?

Or are you a fighter right up to the finishing point?

It should not be too much effort for you to be agressive.

You may be trying to get too much pleasure out of life and may be unwilling to make exertion which means greater success.

If you are honest with yourself you will ask yourself these questions, and the result ought to be of great benefit to you.

None is so interested in your career as you ought to be for yourself, and NOW is not too soon to get to work in earnest and STICK TO IT.

MAKING THE WILL WORK

By Dave Sentner.

I'VE been taking up this new trick about making your will work before you're dead. You say in one ear to yourself: "I'm getting better and better every day." Then you answer yourself in the other ear: "I'm getting better and better every day." You'd be surprised the action you get.

After talking to myself for a week I went in to the boss and asked him for a raise. He asked me what for. I said: "I'm getting better and better every day." He told me I'd better get the hell out of his firm. I didn't care, he couldn't break my will.

I walked up Summer street, developing my will power en route. At Kingston street a cop said: "What are you blocking traffic for?" I told him I was getting better and better. He said there might be some doubt so I better start all over again.

When I was discharged from the hospital they took me before the judge. He informed me I was charged with attempting to block traffic and assaulting an officer in the performance of his duties, and did I have anything to say. I said: "I am getting better and better every day."

The judge said that at the end of thirty days in the workhouse I ought to be perfect. So you see how it works, if you only have the will power to keep at it.

Bob was cashier in a bank in a small country town. He had been engaged to Dolly Brown, but alas! a rift came in the lute! They quarreled.

"And please remember," said Dolly in haughty tones as she handed back the ring, "that when we meet again we meet as strangers."

A few days later she entered the bank to cash a check. Bob was on duty. He took the slip of paper, eyed it back and front, and then, instead of counting out the money, handed back the check.

His time for revenge had come. "I'm sorry, madam," he said coldly, "but it is against the rules of the bank for the cashier to cash checks for strangers. You must find someone in town to identify you."

Medbury Says It's a Toss-Up Who Got Cheated in Swap of Wife for Flivver

By John P. Medbury

NEWS has just gotten into the papers where a New York man traded his wife for a Ford automobile, and now it's up to the court to decide which one got cheated.

THE man who got the Ford claims the car wasn't a new one and the guy who got the wife says she was second hand, too.

FOR five or six bucks he could have married a brand new dame and still had a car in which to take her out riding.

THE other bird has the Ford but nobody to take out in it.

THE guy who gave away the wife is a teamster and needed a truck more than he did a mate.

HE decided to get an automobile the same day that his wife refused to carry any more trunks to and from the railroad station.

HE'LL probably have to raise his rates now because it will cost more for him to deliver a trunk in a Ford than it would if his wife carried it down to the depot.

HE figured that he could give the Ford a coat of paint and find he as good as new. The other guy probably figured he could do the same thing with the wife.

TO the teamster, a wife was a luxury and the truck was a necessity.

IT'S too bad he couldn't have got ten the truck and kept the wife, too, because she could have driven the truck.

HE has to hire a helper now and pay him a salary every week, but if you've got a wife all the money you have to lay out is the price of the marriage license.

STILL, I don't think a helper any time he wants without having to go through the divorce courts.

WHEN you discharge a helper you're through, but when you fire your wife you have to pay her alimony.

ALL of this stuff wouldn't have gotten into the newspapers except that the Ford was a stolen car.

THIS bird probably figured he wouldn't lose anything because the car didn't belong to him, anyway.

JUDGING from the stolen machine and the borrowed wife he likes to have things in his possession as long as the license was in both cases a name.

THE teamster finally had the Ford taken away from him by the police and went to get his wife back, but she started also had run away from the guy he trailed her to.

NOW the two men are without a wife and a truck and both of them probably have to get out and shift for themselves.

POLLY AND HER PAL

By Gerald McDonald

"I'M through!" We part."
She screamed in rage.
Her shrill voice pierced the air.
He calmly smiled. It seemed at most
As though he did not care.

He sipped his steaming cup of tea.
"I'm through!" again she cried.
"Now Polly, wait," he tried to smile,
"Shut up!" she said, "you lied!"

He puffed his Turkish cigarette.
"I through!" once more she screeched.
And flew across the room to get
The cup for which he reached.

He quickly met her face to face,
And heeding not her rage
He pocked the angry parrot up
And put her in her cage.

World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

By Charles Major

Louis XI. receives Mary's photograph and swears he will marry no other

AS to Mary's dower, Henry was to pay Louis only four hundred thousand crowns, but he made the marriage an excuse for an extra hundred thousand, to be devoted to his own private use.

When we arrived at the palace, the girls went to their apartments and I to mine, where I found Brandon reading. There was only one window to our common room —a dormer-window, set into the roof, and reached by a little passage as broad as the window itself, and perhaps a yard and a half long. In the alcove thus formed was a bench along the wall, cushioned by Brandon's great campaign cloak. In this window we often sat and read, and here was Brandon with his book. I had intended to tell him the girls were coming, for when Mary asked me if I thought he would come to her at the palace, and when I had again said no, she reiterated her intention of going to him at once, but my courage failed me and I did not speak of it.

I knew that Mary ought not to come to our room, and that if news of it should reach the king's ears there would be more and worse trouble than ever, and, as usual, Brandon would pay the penalty for all. Then again, if it were discovered it might seriously compromise both Mary and Jane, as the world is full of people who would rather say and believe an ill thing of another than to say their prayers or to believe the holy creed.

I had said as much to the Lady Mary when she expressed her determination to go to Brandon She as been in the wrong so much of late that she was humbled, and I was brave enough to say whatever I felt; but she said she had thought it all over, and as every one was away from Greenwich it would not be found out if done secretly.

She told Jane she need not go; that she, Mary, did not want to take any risk of compromising her.

You see, trouble was doing a good work in the princess, and had made it possible for a generous thought for another to find spontaneous lodgment in her heart. What a great thing it is, this human suffering, which so sensitizes our sympathy, and makes us tender to another's pain. Nothing else so fits us for earth or prepares us for heaven.

Jane would have gone, though, had she known that all her fair name would go with her. She was right, you see, when she told me while riding over to Windsor, that should Mary's love blossom into a full-blown passion she would wreck everything and everybody, including herself perhaps, to attain the object of so great a desire.

It looked now as if she were on the high road to that end. Nothing short of chains and fetters could have kept her from going to Brandon that evening. There was an inherent force about her that was irresistible and swept everything before it.

In our garret she was to meet another will, stronger and infinitely better controlled than her own, and I did not know how it would all turn out.

I had not been long in the room when a knock at the door announced the girls. I admitted them, and Mary walked to the middle of the floor. It was just growing dark and the room was quite dim, save at the window where Brandon sat reading. Could those were exciting moments; my heart beat like a woman's. Brandon saw the girls when they entered, but never so much as looked up from his book. You must remember he had a great grievance. Even looking at it from Mary's side of the case certainly its best point of view, he had been terribly misused, and I was all the worse that the matter had come from one who, from his standpoint, had pretended to love him, and had wantonly led him on, as he had the best of right to think, to love her, and to suffer the keenest pangs a heart can know. Then you must remember he did not know even the best side of the matter, bad as it was, but saw only the naked fact, that in recompense for his great help in time of need, Mary had deliberately allowed him to lie in that dungeon a long, miserable month, and would have suffered him to die. So it was no wonder his heart was filled with bitterness toward her. Jane and I had remained near the door, and poor Mary was a pitiable princess, standing there so full of doubt in the middle of the room. After a moment she stepped toward the window, and, with quick-coming breath, stopped at the threshold of the little passage.

"Master Brandon, I have come, not to make excuses, for nothing can excuse me, but to tell you how it all happened—by trusting another."

Brandon arose, and marking the place in his book with his finger, followed Mary, who had stepped backward into the room.

"Your highness is very gracious and kind thus to honor me, but as our ways will hereafter lie as far apart as the world is broad, I think it would have been far better had you refrained from so imprudent a visit; especially as anything one so exalted as yourself may have to say can be no affair of such as I—one just free of the headsman's noose."

"Oh! don't! I pray you. Let me tell you, and it may make a difference. It must pain you, I know, to think of me as you do, after—after—you know; after what has passed between us."

"Yes, that only makes it all the harder. If you could give your kisses"—and she blushed red as blood—"to one for whom you care so little that you could leave him to die like a dog, when a word from you would have saved him, what reason have I to suppose they are not for every man?"

This gave Mary an opening of which she was quick enough to take advantage, for Brandon was in the wrong.

"You know that is not true. You are not honest with me nor with yourself, and that is not like you. You know that no other man ever had, or could have, any favor from me, even the slightest. Wantonness is not among my thousand faults. It is not that which angers you. You are sure enough of me in that respect. In truth, I had almost come to believe you were too sure, that I had grown cheap in your eyes, and you did not care so much as I thought and hoped for what I had to give, for after that day you came not near me at all. I know it was the part of wisdom and prudence that you should remain away; but had you cared as much as I, your prudence would not have held you."

She hung her head a moment in silence then, looking at him, almost ready for tears, continued: "A man has no right to speak in that way of a woman whose little favors he has taken, and make her regret that she has given a gift only that it may recoil upon her, 'Little,' did I say? Sir, do you know what that—first—kiss was to me? Had I possessed all the crowns of all the earth I would have given them to you as willingly. Now you know the value I placed on it, however worthless it was to you. Yet I was a cheerful giver of that great gift, was I not? And can you find it in your heart to make of it a shame to me—that of which I was so proud?"

She stood there with head inclined a little to one side, looking at him inquiringly as if awaiting an answer. He did not speak, but looked steadily at his book. I felt, however, that he was changing, and I was sure her beauty, never more exquisite than in its present humility, would yet atone for even so great a fault as hers. Err, look beautiful, and receive remission! Such a woman as Mary carries her indulgence in her face.

I now began to realize for the first time the wondrous power of this girl, and ceased to marvel that she had always been able to turn even the king, the most violent, stubborn man on earth, to her own wishes. Her manner made her words eloquent, already, with true feminine tactics, she had put Brandon in the wrong in everything because he was wrong in part.

Then she quickly went over what she had said to me. She told of her great deed; lest she be slow to learn of the visit to Grouche's and its fatal consequences, knowing full well it would render Henry impervious to her influence and precipitate the French marriage.

KIMONO, By JOHN PARIS

Great Exposure of How Japanese Treat Their Women

SUPPRESSED BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

This startling and intensely interesting story of the Cherry Blossom Kingdom, telling what the Japanese think of women, was suppressed by the Japanese government. The expose has stunned Europe and opened the eyes of the world to what has really been going on. John Paris, the author, was an English diplomat there for years.

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY:

THE HONORABLE GEOFFREY BARRINGTON, son of Lord Brandon, a Captain in the British Army, resigns his commission when he weds

ASAKO FUJINAMI, heiress, daughter of Japanese parents who are dead; brought up and educated in French convent schools and introduced to London society by

LADY EVERINGTON, a brilliant matchmaker, who did not foresee the result of the bringing together of the two. At the reception toasts are drunk to the closer union of Britain and Japan, but both British and Japanese diplomats in the distinguished company evade the suggestion that the couple visit Japan, as appears to be their desire. Some of the reception guests frankly question the wisdom of the marriage and doubt the possibility of a happy life for the pair. Lady Everington, in her anxiety for the young Captain, who has been her special protege, interviews

COUNT SATIO, the Japanese Ambassador, who tells her the Fujinamis belong to the nouveaux riches of Japan, but gives little information of their origin or the source of their wealth. A visit to his wife's guardians, the Murata's, a Japanese family living in Paris, and a sojourn among the cosmopolitans of Deauville, sharpen the desire to see Japan. Aboard the ship they meet

VISCOUNT KAMINURA, returning home to wed a bride he has never seen. A stop at Nagasaki is the first sight of Japan.

SHE had no word for any of them. Even the man-like womenfolk, who golfed and rowed and clambered, were to her indignant eyes dangerous panders to the lusts of men, disguised allies of Madame Cythere.

"Are they all bad?" she asked Geoffrey.

"No, little girl, I don't suppose so. They look too dismal to be bad."

Geoffrey was grateful for the turn of events which had delivered up his wife again into his sole company. He had missed her society more than he dared confess; for uxoriousness is a pitiful attitude. In fact, it is Bad Form.

At this period he wanted her as a kind of mirror for his self-love and for his own person. She saw to it that his clothes were spotless and that his tie was correct. Of course, he always dressed for dinner even when they dined in their room. She too would dress herself up in her new finery when eyes alone. She would listen to him laying down the law on subjects which he would not have broach or be talking to anyone else.

She flattered him in that silent way which is so soothing to a man of his character. Her mind seemed to absorb his thoughts with the readiness of a blotting paper; and he did not pause to observe whether the impression had come out blackheads or formulas. He who had been so mute among Lady Everington's gentlemen fell all of a sudden into loquaciousness which was merely the reaction of his love for his wife, the instinct which makes the male bird sing. He just went on talking; and every day he became in his own estimation and in that of Asako, a more intelligent, a more original and a more eloquent man.

From the deep sleep

Sweet is the sound
Of the ship as it rides the waves.

WHEN August snow fell upon St. Moritz, the Barringtons deserted for Milan, Florence, Venice and Rome. Towards Christmas they found the way to the Riviera, where they met Lady Everington at Monte Carlo, very indignant, or pretending to be so, at the neglect with which she had been treated.

"Fairy godmothers are important people," she said, "and easily offended. Then, they turn you into wild animals, or send you to sleep for a hundred years. Why didn't you write to me, child?"

They were sitting on the terrace with the Casino behind them, overlooking the blue Mediterranean. A few yards farther on, a tall, young Englishman was chatting and laughing with a couple of girls too elaborately beautiful and too dazzingly gowned for any world but the half-world. Suddenly he turned, and noticed Lady Everington. With a courteous farewell to his companions, he advanced to greet her.

"Aubrey Laking," she exclaimed, "you never answered the letter I wrote to you at Tokyo."

"Dear Lady Georgie, I left Tokyo ages ago. It followed me back to England, and I am now second secretary at Christiania. That is why I am in Monte Carlo!"

"Then let me introduce you to Asako Fujinami, who is now Mrs. Barrington. You must tell her all about Tokyo. It is her native city; but she has not seen it since she was in long clothes. All Japanese babies wear such things."

At Eton Together

Aubrey Laking and Barrington had been at Eton together. They were old friends, and were delighted to meet once more. Barrington, especially, was pleased to have this opportunity to hear about Japan from one who had but lately left the country, and who was moreover a fluent and agreeable talker. Laking had not resided in Japan long enough to get tired of orientalism. He described the quaint, the picturesque, the amusing side of life in the East. He was full of enthusiasm for the land of soft voices and smiling faces, where countless little shops spread their wares under the light of the evening lanterns, where the twang of the samisen and the geisha's song are heard coming from the lighted tea-house, and the shadow of the behind-like coiffure is seen appearing and disappearing in silhouette against the paper shoji.

The East was drawing the Barringtons towards its perilous coasts. Laking's position at the Tokyo Embassy had been taken by Reggie Forsyth, one of Geoffrey's oldest friends, his best man at his wedding and a light of Lady Everington's circle. Already Geoffrey had sent him a postcard, saying, "Warm up the sake bottle," (Geoffrey was becoming quite learned in things Japanese), "and expect friends shortly."

However, when the Barringtons did at last tear themselves from the Riviera, they announced rather disengenuously that they were going to Egypt.

"They are too happy," Lady Everington said to Laking a few days later, "and they know nothing. I am afraid there will be trouble."

"Oh, Lady Georgie," he replied, "I have never known you to be a prophetess of gloom. I would have thought the auspices were most fortunate."

"They ought to quarrel more than they do," Lady Everington complained. "She ought to contradict him more than she does. There must be a volcanic element in marriage. It is a sign of trouble coming when the fires are quiet."

Plenty of Money

"But they have got plenty of money," expostulated Aubrey, whose troubles were invariably connected with his banking account, "and they are very fond of each other. Where is the trouble to come from?"

"Trouble is on the lookout for all of us, Aubrey," said his companion, "it is no good flying from it, even. The only thing to do is to look it in the face and laugh at it; then it gets annoyed sometimes, and goes away. But those two poor dears are sailing into the middle of it, and they don't even know how to laugh yet."

"You think that Egypt is hopelessly demoralizing. Thousands of people go there and come safely home, almost all, in fact, except Robert Hichen's heroine."

"Oh no, not in Egypt," said Lady Everington; "Egypt is only a stepping stone. They are going to Japan."

"Well, certainly Japan is harmless enough. There is nobody there worth flirting with except us at the Embassies, and we generally have our hands full. As for the visitors, they are always under the influence of Cook's tickets and Japanese guides."

"Aubrey, dear, you think that trouble can only come from flirting or money."

"I know that those two preoccupations are an abundant source of trouble."

"What do you think of Mrs. Barrington?" asked her Ladyship, appearing to change the subject.

"Oh, a very sweet little thing."

"Like your lady friends in Tokyo, the Japanese ones, I mean?"

"Not in the least. Japanese ladies look very picturesque, but they are as dull as dolls. They sidle along in the wake of their husbands, and don't expect to be spoken to."

"And have you no more intimate experience?" asked Lady Everington. "Really, Aubrey, you have not been living up to your reputation."

Kept Establishment

"Well, Lady Georgie," the young man proceeded, easing at his polished boots with a well-assumed air of embarrassment, "since I know that you are one of the enlightened ones, I will confess to you that I did keep a little establishment a la Pierre Loti. My Japanese teacher thought it would be a good way of improving my knowledge of the local idiom; and this knowledge meant an extra hundred pounds to me for interpreter's allowance, as it is called, I thought, too, that it would be a relief after diplomatic dinner parties to be able to swear for an hour or so, big round oaths in the company of a dear beloved one who would not understand me. So my teacher undertook to provide me with a suitable female companion. He did. In fact, he introduced me to his sister; and the suitability was based on the fact that she held the same position under me predecessor, a man whom I dislike exceedingly. But this I only found out later on. She was dull, deadly dull. I couldn't even make her jealous. She was as dull as my Japanese grammar; and when I had passed my examination and burnt my books, I dismissed her."

"Aubrey, what a very wicked story!"

"No, Lady Georgie, it was not even wicked. She was not real enough to sin with. The affair had not even the excitement of badness to keep it going."

"Do you know that the Japanese well?" Lady Everington returned to the Bigroad of her inquiry.

"No, nobody does; they are a most secretive people."

"Do you think that, if the Barringtons go to Japan, there is any danger of Asako being shut back into the bosom of her family?"

"No, I shouldn't think so," Laking replied, "Japanese life is so very uncomfortable, you know, even to the Japanese themselves, when once they have got used to living in Europe or America. They sleep on the floor, their clothes are inconvenient, and their food is nasty, even in the houses of the rich ones."

"Yes, it must be a peculiar country. What do you think is the greatest shock for the average traveller who goes there?"

"Lady Georgie, you are asking me very searching questions today. I don't think I will answer any more."

Asako tells Geoffrey she is longing to see Japan

"Just this one," she pleaded.

He considered his boots again for a moment and then, raising his face to hers with that humorous challenging look which he assumes when on the verge of some indiscretion, he replied:

The Yoshiwara

"The Yoshiwara."

"Yes," said her ladyship, "I have heard of such a place. It is a kind of Vanity Fair, isn't it, for all the cocottes of Tokyo?"

"It's more than that," Laking answered; "it is a market of human flesh, with nothing to disguise the crude fact except the picturesqueness of the place. It is a square enclosure as large as a small town. In the enclosure are shops, and in the shop windows women are displayed just like goods, or like animals in cages; for the windows have wooden bars. Some of the girls sit there stolidly like stuffed images, some of them come to the bars and try to catch hold of the passers-by, just like monkeys, and joke with them and shout after them.

"But I could not understand what they said—fortunately, perhaps. The girls—there must be several thousands—are all dressed up in bright kimonos. It really is a very pretty sight, until one begins to think. They have their price tickets hung up in the shop windows, one shilling up to one pound. That is the greatest shock which Japan has in store for the ordinary tourist."

"After all," she said, "is it any worse than Piccadilly Circus at night?"

"It is not a question of better or worse," argued Laking. "Such a pretty mercenary system is a terrible offence to our most cherished belief. We may be hypocrites, but our hypocrisy itself is an admission of guilt and an act of worship. To us, even to the readiest sinners among us, woman is always something divine. The lowest assignation of the streets has at least a disguise of romance. It symbolizes the words and the ways of Love, even if it parodies them. But to the Japanese woman must be merely animal. You buy a girl as you buy a cow."

Shocked by Nothing

Lady Everington, shivered, but she tried to live up to her reputation of being shocked by nothing.

"Well, that is true, after all, whether in Piccadilly or in the Yoshiwara. All prostitution is just a commercial transaction."

"Perhaps," said the young diplomat, "but what about the Ideal at the back of our minds? Passion is often a grotesque incarnation of the Ideal, like a savage's rude image of his god. A glimpse of the ideal is possible in Piccadilly, and impossible in the Yoshiwara. The divine something was visible in Marguerite Gautier; little Hugh saw it even in Nana. For one thing, here in London, in the dirtiest of sordid dramas, it is still the woman who gives, but in Japan it is always the man who takes."

"Aubrey," said his friend, "I had no idea that you were a poet, or in other words that you ever talked nonsense without laughing. You think such a shack is strong enough to upset the Barrington menage?"

"It will give furiously to think," he answered, "to poor old Geoffrey, who is a very straight, clean and honest fellow, not overused to furious thinking. I suppose if one married a monkey, one might persuade oneself of her humanity, until one saw her kindred in cages."

"Poor little Asako, my latest god-daughter!" cried Lady Everington. "Really, Aubrey, you are very rude!"

"I did not mean to be," said Laking penitently. "She is a most ingratiating little creature, like a lazy kitten; but I think it is unwise for him to take her to Japan. All kinds of latent orientalisms may develop."

The Spring was at hand, the season of impulse, when we obey most readily the sudden stirrings of our hearts. Even in the torrid climate of Egypt, squalls of rain passed over like stray birds of passage. Asako Barrington felt the fresh influence and the desire to do new things in new places. Hitherto she had evinced very little inclination to revisit the home of her ancestors. But on their return from the temples of Luxor, she said quite unexpectedly to Geoffrey:

Wants Japan

"If we go to Japan now, we shall be in time to see the cherry-blossoms."

"Why, little Yum Yum," cried her husband, delighted, "are you tired of Pharaoh?"

"Egypt is very interesting," said Asako, correctly; "it is wonderful to think of these great places standing here for thousands and thousands of years. But it makes one sad, don't you think? Everybody here seems to have died long, long ago. It would be nice to see green fields again, wouldn't it, Geoffrey dearest?"

The voice of the Spring was speaking clearly.

"And you really want to go to Japan, sweetheart. It's the first time I've heard you say you want to go."

"Uncle and Aunt Murata in Paris used always to say about now, 'If we go back to Japan we shall be in time to see the cherry-blossoms.'"

"Why," asked Geoffrey, "do the Japanese make such a fuss about their cherry-blossoms?"

"They must be very pretty," answered his wife, "like great clouds of snow. Besides, the cherry-flowers are supposed to be like the Japanese spirit."

"So you are my little cherry-blossom—is that right?"

"Oh no, not the women," she replied, "the men are the cherry-blossoms."

Geoffrey laughed. It seemed absurd to him to compare a man to the frail and transient beauty of a flower.

Then what about the Japanese ladies," he asked, "if the men are blossoms?"

Asako did not think they had any special flower to symbolize their charms. She suggested—

"The bamboo, they say, because the wives have to bend under the storms when their husbands are angry. But, Geoffrey, you are never angry. You do not give me a chance to be like the bamboo."

Next day, he boldly booked their tickets for Tokyo.

Pleasant Voyage

The long sea voyage was a pleasant experience, broken by fleeting visits to startled friends in Ceylon and at Singapore, and enlivened by the close ephemeral intimacies of life on board ship.

There was a motley company on board the S. Minamura, a company whose most obvious elements, the noisy and bibulous pests in the smoking-room and the ladies of mysterious destination with whom they dallied, were dismissed by Geoffrey at once as being terrible bounders. Beneath this seum more congenial spirits came to light, officers and government officials returning to their posts, and a few globetrotters of leisure. Everybody seemed anxious to pay attention to the charming Japanese lady; and from such incessant attention it is difficult to escape within the narrow bounds of ship life. The only way to keep off the impossibles was to form a body guard of the possibles. The seclusion of the honeymoon paradise had to be opened up for once in a way.

Of course, there was much talk about the East, but it was a different point of view, from that of the enthusiasts of Deauville and the Riviera. These men and women had many of them lived in India, the Malay States, Japan or the open ports of China. lived there to earn their bread and butter, not to dream about the magic of the Orient. For such as these the romance had faded. The pages of their busy lives were written within a narrow border of discontent, of longing for that home land, to which on the occasion of their rare holidays they returned so readily, and which seemed to have no particular place or use for them when they did return. They were members of the British Dispersion; but their Zion was of more comfort to them as a sweet memory than as an actual home.

"Yes," they would say about the land of exile, "it is very picturesque."

But their faces, lined or pale, their bitterness and their reticence, told of years of strain, laboriously moneyearning, in lands where relaxations are few and forced, where climate conditions are adverse, where fevers lurk and where the white minority are poised like soldiers in a lonely fort, ever suspicious, ever on the watch.

The most faithful of Asako's bodyguard was a countryman of her own, Viscount Kaminura, the son of a celebrated Japanese statesman and diplomat, who, after completing his course at Cambridge, was returning to his own country for the first time after many years.

He was a shy, gentle youth, very quiet and refined, a little effeminate, even, in his exaggerated gravedulness and in his meticulous care for his clothes and his person. He avoided all company except that of the Barringtons, probably because a similarity in circumstances formed a bond between him and his country woman.

He had a fine, well-poised head, the beautiful deep brown eyes of Asako, curling, sarcastic lips, a nose almost aquiline but starting a fraction of an inch too low between his eyes. He had read everything, he enumerated intimacies of life on board ship.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By Ann Lisle

"WITH you to help," replied Mr. Lacy emphatically. "I'll give you the facts in order, Mrs. Harrison. After you made up how Aunt May felt I got Park on the wire, summoned him down to the shop and went into things with him. Then Park marched over to the Yelda and sent his card up to Rockhill. Rockhill's a nice boy, but he knows his social register better than his diecoast table and his foreign markets. Wayne Parkinson, Third was admitted at once. He suggested that the Yelda Corporation might like to handle a commission he'd heard of to send someone to certain South American capitals with American-made hats. Rockhill was interested. Suggested that he ought to see his principal, Max Hoadley. How about lunch? Park was inclined to think lunch would do very well. But he'd have to consult his principal, Lacy—advertising manager of the Star. Do you begin to see the high hand of diplomacy—or do you think we're a bunch of dubs?"

"Go on," I cried breathlessly.

IS WITH YOU TO HELP, REPLIED PA LACY EMPHATICALLY. "I'LL GIVE YOU THE FACTS IN ORDER."

"Nothing," Ralph Lacy grinned boyishly. "That is, nothing much except an appointment to meet at dinner. It was from that dinner I telephoned you to beg for an hour. Max Hoadley was going out to his country place. Being a gentleman of fixed and settled habits, he seemed to think he must start at his regular hour."

"What did you want of me?" I asked.

"We wanted you to introduce some simple truth into what threatened to be nothing but a maze of diplomacy and of backing and filling to little or no purpose. It may have been our good fortune that you could not come."

"That's not very gallant, is it?" I laughed, quickly adding: "Not that I mind in the least."

"You want the truth," replied Mr. Lacy, intently. "If you'd come we would have yielded to the temptation to force the issue.

"Please don't leave out anything. I like hearing it."

"And do you approve?" asked Mr. Lacy. "Somehow as I tell it to you I feel that we've gone about things indirectly — cheaply, perhaps—and surely not with the fine, clear simplicity you would have contrived."

"Thank you; that's splendid," I found myself replying. "But however cautiously and diplomatically you had to move in dealing with that stubborn man I'm sure you couldn't have done anything dishonest or—unworthy."

"Good!" cried Park. "It takes a woman of your vision to be sure of that from the jump."

I looked up and met his eyes. All of the boyishness was gone from them. They were no longer quizzical. But they revealed a depth and a tenderness I couldn't feel I'd done anything to evoke. For a moment it startled me into forgetting what it was we had met to discuss.

The by-play between Wayne Parkinson and me was mercifully lost on Ralph Lacy. But Park made me feel that in crying out my faith in his friend I had revealed something he was either very glad or very sorry to know. I wasn't sure which.

"Please go on with your story," I said. "I want to know what occurred when you two and the Hoadley-Rockhill combination met at 'diecbeon.'"

PINEX for Coughs

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By Broadan Wall

"Are big business men good or poor speculators in the stock market?" asked the writer of a letter in a large brokerage house last week.

"They are usually heavy losers," came the quick reply, "and I often wonder how they earn all the money they lose."

• • •

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is reputed in some of the biggest brokerage houses to be one of those "tired business men" who get much diversion out of the stock market. Judging from the unsuccessful trips attributed to him in the market, it would require all of his ability as the "world's greatest salesman" to replenish his bank account.

• • •

William C. Durant, former head of the General Motors and now president of the motor company bearing his name, is another captain of industry often reported in the Street to be vitally interested in the stock market. According to reports heard relative to his speculation, he seems to have better luck than Mr. Schwab.

• • •

The big business man usually tries to keep his speculations in the market a secret. Business men say that it would not do their credit any good. In fact, it would have a harmful influence for the general public to know that they took considerable in the field of stock speculation. To listen to some heads of banking institutions one would believe that they abhored buying stocks with the main idea of witnessing an enhancement in market values. Therefore, however, usually cover up their purchases and sales of stocks through the subterfuge of numbered accounts or use of some relative's name, usually their wife.

• • •

There are, however, a number of business men who do not attempt to conceal the fact that they buy and sell securities of the companies they are interested in. Most of them usually enter the market when they believe their own securities are selling under intrinsic values. In other words, they have confidence in their own companies. After the stocks have started upward again they usually sell. A canvass shows that they rarely buy at the low point and seldom get out at the top. As one successful stock market operator once said: "I became rich by staying in at the low and never getting out at the top." Jacob Field, who in the past was one of the most active operators on the floor of the Stock Exchange, is quoted as having said:

"I have seen bulls make a great deal of money and I have seen bears make much money, but I never knew of a bear taking much money out of the stock market."

• • •

Some big business men are familiar with stock speculation. That is, they are acquainted enough with influences making for a rise or fall in prices to know when it is safe to take the short side. The names of these veterans are found on the list of people in Wall Street every day. Other business men sell the stocks of their own companies, when they believe the shares are selling in excess of their real value, but would not sell their own stocks short even when advised by bankers. Because of this attitude it sometimes happens that the public steps into the market and the directors lose control of their own company. There are also some directors who resent any outside interference in the markets for shares of their respective companies.

7 PER CENT STOCKS.

To R. C., Weymouth—With some risk you can get about 7 per cent. in good stocks like General Motors 7 per cent. debentures, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific 7 per cent. preferred and American Sugar Refining preferred. Buy ten shares each. Your American Telephone & Telegraph is worth holding and Liberty bonds are the best investment in the world.

U. S. STEEL.

To A. A., Haverhill—U. S. Steel is selling rather high for good investment yield, but it has possibilities. When it recently soared to 131½, Steel common was at the highest price in almost three years, or since November 5, 1919, when it touched 132⅝.

In every previous year in which stock has sold at or above 111 the total dividend disbursements for the year have been in excess of regular 5 per cent. rate. In 1919 the high was 115¼ and regular dividends and 1 per cent. extra were paid, a total of 6 per cent. In 1918, when the high was 116⅛, extra dividends brought disbursements to 16 per cent. In 1917, when the stock reached highest price on record, 136⅝, payments totaled 16% per cent., and in 1916, with a high of 129⅝, 7 per cent.

Low in 1921 was 70¼. Lowest price on record was 8⅝ in 1904, and highest price before the war 94⅝, in 1909. As recently as 1915, when no dividends were paid, stock sold as low as 38.

Surplus of United States Steel at close of last year (appropriated and unappropriated) was $649,824,872, equivalent of nearly $25 a share on common.

WOOLWORTH IS ADVANCED OVER NINE POINTS

Stock prices strengthened after reactionary start in New York, there became irregular. Changes were for the most part fractional. Money renewed at 5, but lifted to 6 per cent.

Woolworth was up more than 9 points, continuing its soaring course that has extended over the past few days. National Lead was active and up 4. Consolidated Gas raised over 4. Mack Trucks raised nearly 4.

GENERAL ASPHALT OFF.

Dome Mines and General Asphalt showed losses of 3 to more than 4 points.

U. S. Steel in late trading rose over 2 points and Crucible 3.

Speculation languished in the early afternoon. Buoyancy was exhibited by various minor industrials.

Market Street Railway issues moved up in a spectacular fashion, the common stock rising 3 points, preferred 4¼, the second preferred 7 and the prior preferred 5½.

Tobaccos were also pushed up in an aggressive fashion, American Tobacco gaining 4¾, the B stock 2½ and Tobacco Products A. General Cigar and Reynolds 1 to 1¼.

KELSEY WHEEL UP.

Little change was noted in the railroad sections, apart from Jersey Central, which ruled 4¾ points higher and New Orleans, Texas & Mexico 3.

Declaration of a 50 per cent. stock dividend by May Department Stores caused a rally from 161¼ to 168.

Tendency Is Downward in N. Y. Bond Market

Weakness of foreign bonds and speculative railroad mortgages was the outstanding development in New York bond dealings, the main price tendency in which was downward.

Liberty bonds showed nominal losses.

Further weakness of foreign exchange found reflection in heavy selling of European bonds, Seine 7s dropping 1¾ points and losses of 1 to 1 point being sustained by Belgian 7½s and 8s, French 8s, Bolivian 8s, Denmark 8s and Lyons 6s. Swiss 8s gained a point and Queensland 6s and Solesons 6s improved fractionally.

Tendency Is Downward in N. Y. Bond Market

Weakness of foreign bonds and speculative railroad mortgages was the outstanding development in New York bond dealings, the main price tendency in which was downward.

Liberty bonds showed nominal losses.

Further weakness of foreign exchange found reflection in heavy selling of European bonds, Seine 7s dropping 1¾ points and losses of 1 to 1 point being sustained by Belgian 7½s and 8s, French 8s, Bolivian 8s, Denmark 6s and Lyons 6s. Swiss 8s gained a point and Queensland 6s and Solesons 6s improved fractionally.

Erie issues were again under pressure, the general 4s dropping 1¾ points and prior lien 4s 1¼.

WHEELER SEES CONGRESS DRY BY 2 TO 1

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

Washington, Nov. 8. — Wayne Wheeler, head of the Anti-Saloon League, asked about New York State sweeping the Democratic ticket into office, overwhelmingly, with a wet plank in the platform, said:

"New York State has never been a leader on any questions involving moral welfare. However, the House and Senate are both still safely dry in sentiment and there should be a two-to-one sentiment on the face of the returns in favor of enforcement of the dry amendment.

"I heard that Volstead is beaten, but by a preacher who is just as dry as he is. The bad feature about big defeat, though, is that a wet will succeed him as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee—Graham, of Pennsylvania.

The overwhelming wet victory in New Jersey Mr. Wheeler passed over lightly.

"New Jersey has always been a wet State," he said. "It was the last State to ratify the 18th amendment and it did that grudgingly. We had no hope of carrying New Jersey."

GINTER GAMBOL A BIG HIT AT JORDAN HALL

The "Ginter Gambol of 1922," a rollicking extravaganza, was presented before a large and enthusiastic audience by members of the Ginter Employes Benevolent Association at Jordan Hall.

Directed by Joseph A. Greaves, the cast of over 150, recruited entirely from the Ginter Company's stores and restaurants, gave a presentation abounding with catchy music, beautiful costumes and girls.

The performance, listed as a "Musical Whiz-Bee," began with an opening scene revealing Pessimist and Grouch, portrayed by H. J. Hooper and Thomas Convery, bemoaning the change the world had gone to the dogs. They were set right by Hope, Bessie Boudreau, and Positivity, James H. McInerney, who offered to lead them to happiness.

The scene shifts to the stage door, where James McInerney, Mildred Joyce, James Pavern, William King, Frank Cadogan, Marion Doherty, Ben Engleman, Joseph Cushing, Bertha Albina, Emerson Brooks, Anna Dusick, Mae Cassidy, Pearl Powers and Robert Hartley proceed to add new glamor to the footlights.

The next stop was "Hicksville," where entertainment was furnished by Charles Chapman, Carroll Burns, Thomas Norton, Thomas Burke, David Wilson, Helen Cashran, William King, Irene Ritchie and Edna Nason.

In "The Little Red School House" act, Marian Casali and Lucille Elliott played the part of village suit-ups. Howard Beale and Edna Nason presented a cake-walking specialty on the "New Orleans Levee."

Miss Anna Dusick made a hit with solos, and living poses were given by Pearl Powers, Dick Rose and Dorothy Adams. "Home Again," featuring Lucille Millett and Bob Hartlett, with Margaret Grant, brought the show to a close.

Male Help Wanted

SALESMEN: JUDGE THIS FOR YOURSELF

You see a good many advertisements promising "the opportunity of a lifetime," "big salary," "rapid promotion." Perhaps you have looked into some of these "opportunities" and have lost interest in them.

We have something to tell you about, but nothing to promise you. There is nothing here except a four-square, straightforward, successful business enterprise owned and operated by some of the most substantial, well-known men in New England.

It will take you half an hour to learn what it is and what there is in it for the salesman who can measure up to its needs. If you are not then as enthusiastically certain that this is the sort of opening you have been looking for, and had begun to believe didn't exist, why, you aren't the man we want and we aren't the people you want to talk up to. But it would be a good idea to write to and find out. Box 8171, Boston American.

Massachusetts Rebukes Harding Administration

The people of Massachusetts are disgusted with Normalcy.

Their rebuke of the Harding administration—and it was a rebuke, in view of the election of Cox and Lodge by the most meagre margins on record—is part of a nation-wide expression of dissatisfaction with the Harding policies on tariff, prohibition, soldiers' bonus and other vital issues of the day.

What Massachusetts almost accomplished, New York did accomplish in a remarkable political reversal. Alfred E. Smith was elected Governor with the largest plurality ever given to any candidate for Governor anywhere. He ran as a liberal, opposed by Miller, a conservative.

Edwards, a liberal of New Jersey, is elected United States Senator from that State. Volstead seems defeated in Minnesota. Hiram Johnson, a liberal, wins in California. Pinchot, a liberal, wins in Pennsylvania.

The Democrats have gained at least two members in the United States Senate. They have won in New York, New Jersey and Rhode Island, probably Maryland, and the prospects are bright in West Virginia.

There has been an upheaval in the lower House, the Democrats gaining between sixty and seventy votes. Democratic gains in the House have been so great as to make practically certain no measure of a purely Republican program can be forced through the next Congress.

The ballot pendulum has swung—away from Normalcy, in the direction of progress. The year 1924 holds high promise.

Europe's Money Drops

Running Away From the Franc

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The other day the French franc dropped badly and suddenly. It was worth less than seven cents. It ought to be worth twenty cents.

You read "The English are running away from the franc." That helps to explain the sudden drop.

The value of the franc depends on the value of German debts to France. The English have made up their minds that the German debt isn't worth much, and they have been using their French money to buy American money.

And that "running away" from French currency has helped to put it down.

After awhile Europeans will realise that they must go up or go down together, and must devise a plan that will protect, if possible, the WHOLE European civilization.

The French are handicapped by the fact that, unlike the United States, France is controlled, government and all, by many millions of LITTLE people, and she must think about them. Here we have a government carried on chiefly by a handful of BIG people, and they manage comfortably because they can forget the little people except once every four years or thereabouts, and even then a nice gentle "line of talk" is all that is necessary.

Our Wicked Consul

Actually Tried to Get Business

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The American Consul at Newcastle tried to get some business for American ships. Our good British friends could not stand that and the American Consul had to get out.

Now the British government is told by the United States that that particular Consulate will remain empty unless the British withdraw their charges against the United States Consul. An empty American Consulate wouldn't be convenient for the citizens of Newcastle, and the British government will patch the thing up.

In view of the fact that Great Britain has Consuls all over the world, and that THEIR main business, which they attend to most skilfully, is to get trade for Great Britain and freight for British ships, the dismissal of the American Consul at Newcastle is a little difficult to understand. Have we, perhaps, no right to own ships? Are they taboo to the U. S. A. as canoes were taboo to women of the South Seas?

9,500 'Unlawful Homicides'

Millions of Deaths, Also "Unlawful"

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Statistics show 9,500 murders, called "unlawful homicides" in 1921. There is agitation about that.

But other killings more numerous are just as "unlawful" since they are caused by violation of the laws of health and of science.

If the public's representatives were as much interested in killings caused by consumption, malaria, hook worm, pneumonia, etc., it would be a good thing for the public health.

It is hard to make "unlawful homicides" based on ignorance interesting to the public.

Nathan Straus in his campaign to save children used to say, "If I announced that I would hire Madison Square Garden and publicly cause the death of one child there, I should be torn to pieces by the crowd. But a company can sell poisonous milk and kill thousands of children for a profit, and nobody takes interest in it."

The Cat and the Billionaire

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER is used to giving that he would doubtless be willing to give full credit to the cat.

Though Ford with his flivver is running him a good race Mr. Rockefeller probably is still the richest man on record.

Better than that, he is also the most bountiful and, perhaps, the wisest donor of all days.

You may have your choice among his varied benefactions, but sentiment and sympathetic imagination make us choose the medical work carried on under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation as the farthest reaching influence of these wonder-working dollars.

At any rate, it is the one human investment of the Rockefeller wealth that is of greatest interest in connection with our theme.

Mr. Rockefeller is now a very old man, as human life is measured by average duration. But evidently he intends to live not only as long as the law allows, but as long as the science of health enables him to elude the Grim Reaper.

You will remember that, at Mark Twain's seventieth birthday celebration, Dean Howells, on presenting the guest of the evening, said that the richest man of all time must envy him his perfect digestion.

In those days, Mr. Rockefeller was so seemingly confirmed a dyspeptic that he lived mainly on the memory of the feed of his childhood.

And this is where the cat comes back into our story.

Dr. Gannon of Harvard University selected a healthy tabby to study the movements of a normal, healthy stomach by means of the X-ray.

When the cat was angered, the movements of her stomach practically stopped. When Kitty's fur was stroked the right way, she purred happily and her stomach worked overtime.

Dr. Bigger, Mr. Rockefeller's personal physician, translated this evidence of "the power of mind over matter" into terms of service to his distinguished patient.

Of old a cat could look at a king, but today that same feline can save the life of a billionaire.

The point of all this is in its suggestion to you to go and do likewise.

No, not to pursue the elusive millions, but to achieve that happy-mindedness which is available to the poorest of us.

Gross Injustice

Editor Boston American:

Referring to the case of George Chandler of the Peabody High School football team, who was ousted from the banquet given in Peabody in honor of the local athletes and the visiting Charleston (S. C.) High School team, is the greatest case of humiliation and gross injustice ever accorded a football player. It certainly demands comment. It is about time that petty prejudices against the negro were forgotten. It is near time that such an atrocious attitude toward the colored people were condemned. What would Abe Lincoln think of such offences fifty years after the proclamation of emancipation.

On the other hand, it is not wholly a case of race prejudice, but of appreciation of individual merit. George Chandler has been one of the main cogs in the Peabody football machine this season. Peabody football team has enjoyed its many victories only through his ever-willing and relentless efforts. Yet in revenge for his unselfish efforts he is cast aside, disappointed and greatly humiliated on the eve of great rejoicing. Action should be taken to request an apology from the players and officials of the Southern Institution and such petty prejudices should be forever abolished and fair play awarded regardless of race, creed or other.

Fly Service Flags

Editor Boston American:

During the great war the beautiful, although often sad, custom of flying service flags was inaugurated for the first time in history, I believe. This manifestation of one of the highest concepts of mankind—patriotism—seemed to me at the time to be too beautiful a practice to be allowed to lapse in the years to come. I believed that in the intervening time some American in public life would surely have taken measures towards perpetuating this inspiring and distinctly American custom, but no one has done so to my knowledge.

What memories it would evoke if on this year, and each succeeding year on Armistice Day, our service flags were to be flown with Old Glory by those who flew them during the war! On this day churches, business houses, all societies and public corporations would do well to fly their large service flags in addition to the national emblem.

Dancing of the Mind

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 8.—And now comes dancing with the mind!

Many funny things have happened with the passing of time, and once there was when a young woman who danced in public publicly with anything except her feet was subject to an immediate trip to the hoosegow. But times change—so has dancing.

Miss Irene d'Annelle has arrived in Los Angeles to teach dancing with the mind.

"Dancing is merely an expression of primitive instincts unless subjected to the refining influence of mental processes," says Miss d'Annelle. "There is a philosophy in the dance of peoples just as there is philosophy in their religion, art or literature."

It is to teach this philosophy in the formation of a club that Miss d'Annelle says she has come to Los Angeles. This club, which will be for working girls, is to be more than a refuge for tired bodies and a rendezvous for gossip, she claims.

In pointing out the possibilities of dance philosophy, Miss d'Annelle said that if the working girls is given an appreciative understanding of the beauty of movement and the benefits of coordinate muscular action she will find new joy in her work and new capabilities, which had lain dormant through poor blood circulation and improper state of mind.

"There is the dance of the warrior, the peasant and the priest. Why not the dance of the stenographer, the clerk, the cook?" she asks. "Through an appeal to the working girl's love of beauty of face, figure and expression more can be accomplished than by the ineffective methods of preach and much abused tenets of duty-to-self-and-employer cults."

It was for Miss d'Annelle that Edouard Protjes, Belgian composer, wrote the opera, "Ariane," centring the plot about a beautiful Oriental dancer.

Miss d'Annelle came to Los Angeles to take up her duties in the new club for working girls and will devote all her time, she says, to teaching young women to find beauty, health and happiness through dancing with the mind.

SEEN AND HEARD

DR. FRANK A. BRUGGER, masseur at the Cambridge Y. M. C. A., who has rubbed the aches and pains out of thousands of athletes, is also a musician of much ability. The genial doctor's latest song hit, "Let's Go to the Movies," a waltz song, is going big at the music stores.

Six women are studying religious education at the Newton Theological Institution, making in all eighty students who are registered at that institution. Thirty-three States and countries are represented. The junior class has twenty-four, the largest in its history. Thirty-five different colleges are represented in the student body.

Boston had shoplifters in 1712, according to the Boston News Letter—the first newspaper published in this country.

Two women were accused—one stole a piece of fine lace worth sixteen shillings per yard. Another took a bundle of calico under her wide skirts. Both were detected and punished.

PHYSICAL DIRECTOR JOHN W. WATERS of the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. is an expert on schedules. He has just completed schedules for the Greater Boston Bowling League, the Cambridge Industrial Bowling League, the Cambridge Sunday School League, and is at present at work completing basketball schedules for the "Y" and Industrial Athletic League.

One hundred children connected with the Old South Church, Back Bay, have taken one hundred empty bags from the New England Home for Little Wanderers, to be filled with good things, toys, games, which will be sent to that institution for Thanksgiving Day.

Smoking on the streets of Boston was not allowed in 1851, according to the records of the New England Historical Society. The Mayor of that year set apart a place on Boston Common, where smokers could blow their tobacco smoke anywhere they pleased except in the face of passing women, but women were told to avoid the smokers' den on the Common, and they did.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON LIGHT VS. LIGHT

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I, too, read your articles, and am surprised to find how many scientific facts are applicable to everyday affairs. I write to ask if light obstructs light. (1) Given a bundle of nearly parallel rays projected through air and arriving on a flat surface of light tint, would the interposition of a similar bundle intercepting the first at 90 degrees have any effect on the first bundle? (2) Given a faint yellow-white that would affect photographic paper and a given time, would the addition of any number of red lights neutralize the effect of the first one?—P. C., Troy, N. Y."

LIGHT does not obstruct light, but in certain conditions the light-waves interfere, and by such interference they may either reinforce, or weaken, or totally neutralize one another at a given point. The required conditions are not present in the experiments that you describe.

In order that interference be produced the waves must encounter at some point in different phases of vibration. Even when interference takes place the light-waves concerned are not destroyed but they continue on beyond the point of interference absolutely unaltered, although just at that point if they meet in precisely opposite phases their effect is rendered null and darkness results.

This curious phenomenon may be seen also in the case of sound-waves. Two tuning forks may be so placed that the distance between them, in the [illegible] of their prongs, is just equal to the wave length of the sound that they emit. Then, if the ear is placed in the plane of the forks on one side or the other, the waves from the nearer fork will reach the ear in the same phase of vibration as that of the wave from the more distant fork, and the sound will be increased in volume by the combination of the waves.

So if the distance between the forks is two whole wave-lengths, or three, the effect will be the same. But if the distance is made only half a wave-length, then the sound from the farther fork will reach the ear in an opposite phase, of vibration from that of the sound from the nearer fork, and they will neutralize one another, and there will be no sound.

In the case of light the waves are exceedingly minute, and the phenomena of interference are generally observed only in experiments like that by which Young first demonstrated the existence of interference of light. He passed a beam through a narrow horizontal slit in a screen and allowed it to fall upon a second screen pierced by two similar horizontal slits. These two slits then became the sources of two divergent trains of light waves which passed on to a third screen, but on their way partially intersected one another in such a manner that some of their waves met in the same phase and others in the opposite phase, the result being the appearance of a series of light and dark bands where the combined light fell on the third screen. Wherever the conditions of this experiment are satisfied interference of light will be produced.

In your second proposed experiment the introduction of the red light would not affect the actinic properties of the yellow-white light. Red light, because of its lack of photographic effect, is the protecting agent of the "dark room." It possesses illuminating power enough to enable the operator to see what he is about, but its rays have no chemical action on the sensitized film.

BUTTE MINERS TURN DOWN THE I. W. W.

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 8.—After eight years without an organization the 12,000 miners in the Butte district are to have a union through which they will deal with the companies. This is the result of deliberations that have been going on for several weeks between representatives of the mining companies and the men at the mines. Without any organization the men had been getting $4.25 a day. Men representing the Industrial Workers of the World attempted to start a walkout for $6 a day and a six-hour day. It was an absolute fizzle. When the little breeze created by this effort quieted down the companies voluntarily raised the pay of the men fifty cents a day.

After that the men working in the mines went about organizing a union of their own, totally ignoring the radicals who had tried to start a strike.

Several conferences of the mine managers and committees from the men were held. At one of them the managers submitted the draft of what they considered would be a good constitution for such an organization. This the men took down and prepared one of their own, which has proved acceptable to the managers.

Now the miners are organized into what is officially known as the Butte Miners' Workers' Independent Union, the "independent" part of the title meaning that its activities will be confined to the Butte district and that there will be no affiliation with the miners' and smeltermen's organization which succeeded the old Western Federation of Miners.

Reasons for not wishing any connection with the international miners' and smeltermen's organization will be found in the virtual extinction of the old Butte Miners' Union, probably the largest and most powerful labor organization in any mining camp in the world in its time. It was dissatisfaction with the management of that body over the heavy assessments it was levying on the members of affiliated bodies that gave the radical element in the weeks between Christmas and Easter, which was done in 1914.

It was on June 13 of that year that the Butte Miners' Union started to celebrate its anniversary, as it had been doing for years, by a big parade and a general holiday. The radicals broke up the parade before it got well started and proceeded to wreck the union hall, throwing everything out on the street, including the safe, which was carted out of town, broken into and looted.

After the excitement had quieted down repairs were made to the hall and things were going along more or less smoothly until the night of October 22, when Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, came to Butte to straighten matters out. It was the signal for another fight.

Moyer and those friendly to him were virtually barricaded in the Miners' Union Hall. The front of the building was destroyed by explosions of dynamite, and those within left him escape by the rear window and the rioting one man was killed and several wounded.

That was the end of the old miners' union. The men who brought about its demise formed another union, and they practically ran the town and the district for more than two months. The law was defied and the city officers helpless. Finally the Governor sent in the National Guard, and the district had peace. But while the miners had formerly worked under the protection of their big union they now worked without any organization.
